JUNE, GETTLE SAVED FROM KIDNAPERS

Today

Two Nights From Chicago.
The Rising Sun.
Seven Old Indian Ladies.
Forty-seven Good States.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

LOS ANGELES, May 14.

ONLY TWO nights from Chicago, three from New York, four from Miami, on the other side of the continent, which is the writer's present journey, and here you are rolling down toward the Pacific.

At five o'clock the sun rises in a blazing yellow flame at the rear end of the train, climbing up the sky one thousand miles an hour, the speed of the earth on its axis turning toward the East.

Dequincey says the setting sun is the grandest sight in nature, and expects no contradiction, but he is mistaken. The setting sun means an end of the day and of effort, with darkness and death approaching. The rising sun, fierce and daring, with the day's work ahead is the really glorious sight, nowhere more beautiful than on this western desert.

MILLIONS of acres of western lands are called "desert" that, with water added, become as fertile as any acres on earth.

The writer has five thousand acres on the Mojave Desert, twenty-five hundred feet above, 60 miles east of the Pacific, that can show alfalfa fields yielding two tons to the acre, six and seven cuttings each season.

It has not been exactly profitable, farming for the last few years, growing hay that costs $16 a ton to produce, including labor and electric current for irrigation, and selling the hay for $8 to $10 a ton baled.

But that will not last forever, and meanwhile it is a pleasure to see one pump drawing 60,000 gallons of water an hour from a "desert well" only eighty feet deep, and giving to the fertile, thirsty soil all that it asks, one million pounds of water for every ton, five hundred pounds for every pound of alfalfa grown.

A LITTLE WHILE ago this train crossed the Colorado River, to stop at Needles, not very far from the place where the Colorado River empties its wasted waters into the Gulf of California. That water will be used some day to make fertile lands of desert acres and homes for millions, unborn.

And in days still farther off, the genius of man will send the surplus waters of the Mississippi and other rivers over the mountains to irrigate all the western deserts.

The late William Boyce Thompson, an able as well as a very rich man, delighted to work at plans for that transfer of water. It is a curious fact, to which Buckle calls attention, that not one of the great rivers of the North American Continent, except the Columbia, flows into the Pacific Ocean. In days to come Uncle Sam will distribute the waters of his continent whenever they are needed as easily and evenly as water is distributed in a modern apartment house.

AT NEEDLES, named for rough, sharp mountain peaks on the horizon, the same seven old Indian ladies, stolid as the fates, but more gloomy and determined, are waiting to sell you bead necklaces.

All of them have shawls around their shoulders, skirts dragging on the ground, and all but the youngest one have broad blue lines tattooed or otherwise marked perpendicularly from the lower lip all the way down the chin.

There is some, you may be sure, ancient Indian reason for those lines, long since forgotten, perhaps, but you could feel that the old Indian ladies despised the youngest one, whose chin lacked the marking.

Perhaps they are matrimonial lines, they will not tell, and will not tell their names.

One, very old, has her husband with her, carrying futile little bows and arrows for children, but making no effort to sell. Nobody has ever given him a "salesmanship talk" of the "Mr. Grant" variety. His dark old Indian face is marked with the deepest lines you have ever seen on any human being and his deep, dark eyes are sad.

He has no enemy to scalp, no bison to hunt, no war paint to wear, no war whoop to whoop. You would be sad also.

YOU BUY merchandise from the old Indian's wife, and the five other very old ones look upon you with a disconcerting gaze. Who knows what curse descendants of ten thousand generations of red men could put upon you.

You buy from each of them. They are delighted, and laugh, you would not have believed they could do it, when you fail to buy from the youngest one, with no marks on her chin. The young one smiles, argues, and you do buy, the old ladies talk to each other in the Indian language, and you know intuitively that they don't think any more of pale-faces now than they did when they first appeared in these regions, riding on unknown, monstrous animals, the horses of the conquistadores.

AT ALBUQUERQUE, coming through New Mexico, you get all the news of the world from the Albuquerque newspaper. But "all the news," even about kidnapers, about the Negro murdered as he sat in his door because he had told something about a kidnaping, about a United States two and a half million dollar fund to fight crime, and all the general run of news seems as unimportant out in this big country as a

ROOSEVELT ASKS HUGE FUND

900 Millions Sought For Relief, Works. Big Sum for Navy

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for $1,322,000,000 to taper off the emergency recovery expenditures during the coming government year.

The main portion of the fund—$940,905,000—was assigned by the President for general relief and public works purposes. He asked discretionary power to use it as demands required.

Out of this, however, he has tagged $100,000,000 for road construction; $40,000,000 for starting the Navy shipbuilding program; $48,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority; $35,000,000 for public buildings construction and $5,000,000 for the inter-American highway.

DEBT AT NEW HIGH

The appropriation would increase the government debt to the all-time peak of $31,834,000,000 for June 30, 1935, as fixed in the two-year budget submitted to Congress in January.

Pointing to pay-as-you-go basis for the 1936 fiscal year, the President warned in his message today:

"In my judgment an appropriation in excess of the above amount would make more difficult if not impossible an actual balance of the budget in the fiscal year 1936, unless

DILLINGER MOLL GOES ON TRIAL

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 15.—(AP.)—Three persons went on trial today on charges of harboring John Dillinger, notorious criminal.

One was his sweetheart, Evelyn Frechette, who, the government contends, slammed a door in the face of officers as Dillinger and Homer Van Meter, his henchman, shot their way out of an apartment here March 31.

The other two were Dr. Clayton May, Minneapolis physician, and his nurse, Mrs. Augusta May, alleged to have treated wounds Dillinger received in fleeing from the apartment.

The government's principal witness is Mrs. Dolores Smart, of Minneapolis, who, after being reported missing, turned up late yesterday at the office of the United States District Attorney. She is alleged to have accompanied Dr. May when he went to an apartment to treat the gunman.

Four other persons have been indicted on the charge. Three, still at large, are Van Meter, John Hamilton and Pat Riley. The fourth, Mrs. Beth Green, has pleaded guilty.

Rain Again Balks Pirate-Braves Game

Rain prevented the final clash of the series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves at Forbes Field this afternoon—the second successive day they were forced to remain idle. The game will be played as part of a bargain bill on Tuesday, August 28.

The Pirates will meet the Detroit Americans in an exhibition game at Forbes Field tomorrow afternoon, then leave for Brooklyn on their first eastern invasion.

The outlaws have demanded $35,000 and $3,5000 worth of medical supplies as ransom.

TROOPERS GUARDING POLLS

State Police Sent to Homestead, 515,000 Casting Ballots

Allegheny County's vast army of voters waded to the polls today through a series of showers to settle one of the most confusing primary elections in years.

The huge number of enrolled voters—515,746 in the county—and the vast horde of candidates on the ballots pointed to difficulties.

Held in readiness at the Elections Bureau in the County Office Building in case of trouble was a special detail of 12 state police assigned here by order of Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

DISORDERS FEW

But they had little to do. In the assignment room of Common Pleas Court, where election-day squabbles are settled, the scene was strangely quiet in contrast to previous elections.

There were a few disorders, all minor.

Charges of violating the election laws were made against four members of the board in the First District of Homestead's Fourth Ward after Joseph Passafiume had told Judge Thomas M. Marshall that his brother, Charles, a watcher, had been assaulted.

Charles Passafiume himself testified that Edith Anderson, a judge of elections, had been led out of the polling place by the arm and displaced by Dick Loadman.

'STRIP' QUIET

Judge Marshall promised to send deputy sheriffs to the Homestead district, if they were needed.

PENNA. VOTING ON 'NEW DEAL'

By HARRY BERGMAN
International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Men and issues were flung on the altar of public opinion today as upwards of 2,000,000 voters tramped to the polls throughout the commonwealth in one of the most exciting and significant primary elections in the history of Pennsylvania.

Confronted with a host of candidates for nominations in both major parties and the minor parties, the state's citizens held in their hands not only the immediate political fate of Pennsylvania, but the approval or disapproval of the nation's New Deal as well.

Distinguishing this primary from those which have preceded it is the circumstance that the balloting today provides a real test of public reaction to the recovery program of President Roosevelt. Paradoxically, the Democratic na-

Liner Sinks Lightship, 7 Dead

NEW YORK, May 15.—(AP.)—Seven members of the crew of the Nantucket lightship were killed today when the liner Olympic crashed into the lightship 40 miles off the Massachusetts coast today.

No report came shoreward from the liner, but is was heard talking with one of its motor lifeboats by radio.

The Nantucket lightship, which is believed to have had a crew of 16, is one of the most important beacons along the entire Atlantic coast. The ship rides the water 40 miles off the island of Nantucket in a region frequently enshrouded in heavy fogs.

Berlin Balloon Falls In Russia, Two Die

2 ROME FLIERS UNREPORTED

International News Service.

More than 28 hours after they took off from Floyd Bennett Field, New York, on a non-stop flight to Rome, no definite word has been heard today concerning the progress of George R. Pond and Cesare Sabelli.

Although due near the coast of Ireland about 10 a. m. E. D. T. they had not been sighted at noon, the Britist Air Ministry reported.

No steamships along that route had reported sighting their Bellanca plane.

Despite the absence of any word, no particular anxiety was felt since the plane had sufficient fuel to keep it aloft until 3:30 a. m. E. D. T. tomorrow and weather reports indicated reasonably favorable flying conditions.

The fact that Pond and Sabelli had not been sighted off the Irish coast was not considered alarming since it was considered possible they might have passed well to the south, heading directly for the southern coast of France.

2 TAKEN FROM TORTURE DENS OF ABDUCTORS; RANSOM UNPAID

Associated Press.

Two victims of kidnapers—little June Robles, of Tucson, Ariz., and William F. Gettle, of Beverly Hills, Cal.—have been rescued alive, and without the payment of ransom.

Their rescues came late yesterday within a short time of each other. Abductors had demanded $75,000 for the return of Gettle and $15,000 for the 6-year-old Tucson child.

Gettle was found in a house at La Crescenta, a foothills town near Beverly Hills. He was bound to a bed, and a court-plaster mask sealed his lips. He was unharmed. Three men and two women are held today as suspects in his abduction, which occurred early last Thursday.

The Robles girl was found in a desert grave, roofed with tin, burlap and cacti. She had been held there 19 days. She was dirty and sunburned. She was chained to an iron post driven into the floor of her shallow tomb. An unsigned letter to the Governor of Arizona led to her rescue.

No arrests have been made in the Robles case.

June Robles, 6, Found Chained In Desert Cave

TUCSON, Ariz., May 15.—(AP.)—Little June Robles is home again, rescued from the desert tomb where kidnapers had kept her prisoner for 19 terrifying days.

Physicians watched over her today to ascertain how seriously she may have been affected by an ordeal which might easily have killed her; blazing days of a sun that burned her olive skin, and chilly, lonely nights in iron chains that gripped her slender ankles.

An unsigned letter, postmarked Chicago, gave the directions that led to her rescue late yesterday afternoon by her uncle, Carlos Robles, and Clarence Houston, Pima County attorney.

Robles flatly denied rumors that the child's kidnapers had received $10,000 in ransom money before the little girl was released from her desert prison. He declared:

LETTER SAVES LIFE

The letter that saved the girl's life—she could not have survived much longer in her desert dungeon—was received yesterday at the office of Gov. Moeur in Phoenix. It gave explicit instructions for finding the girl "buried under a cactus" near Tucson. The use of the word "buried" sent a chill down the backs of the hunters, for they feared it meant she was dead.

The letter was sped to Houston and his deputy, Robles.

Driving out to a point indicated on Rincon way, a desert road, they began beating about the bushes and thorny cacti.

Houston was separated from

3 Men, 2 Women Held as Suspects In Gettle Snatch

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—(AP.)—Three men arrested in the kidnaping of William F. Gettle, who was released un-ransomed and unharmed last night, were reported by authorities today to have admitted participation in the abduction of the Beverly Hills millionaire.

Statements of the three, made in the presence of police, detectives, Sheriff's deputies and post-office inspectors, named Jimmy Kirk as the alleged "brains" of the plot; Larry Kerrigan as the man who guarded Gettle, and Roy Williams as the one who aided Kirk in seizing the millionaire at his summer home last week

Under questioning by Capt. Morris G. Stensland, of the Sheriff's office, Kerrigan was quoted as saying he was to have received $18,000 for acting as Gettle's guard, and that Kirk had ordered Gettle to write the letters regarding arrangements for delivery of the $60,000 ransom

DENIES KNOWING WOMEN

Kirk, in his statement before the officers, said the plot to kidnap Gettle was his idea, but that Williams and Kerrigan helped him make the plans.

Asked if anyone else was involved in the plot, Kirk said:

"That is all."

He said he knew nothing about

Cyrus Curtis Estate Worth $18,000,000

NORRISTOWN, May 15.—(AP.)—The value of the personal estate of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher who died last June, was given as $18,603,187 in an inventory filed with the Register of Wills today.

Most of the estate is represented by stock in publishing organizations. His yacht, Lyndonia, was placed at $150,000, and furnishings at his home, "Lyndon," at Cheltenham, were listed at $50,727.

Reed, Margiotti Leading 'Man in Street' Poll

A strong lead was held by Senator David A. Reed over Gov. Pinchot in a straw vote of the man on the street, conducted by the Sun-Telegraph today.

Attorney General William A. Schnader and Attorney Charles J. Marigotti were running neck-and-neck in the poll, with Margiotti leading by seven votes.

The poll, which showed a majority of Republican votes, gave Joseph F. Guffey and George H. Earle, the regular organization candidates on the Democratic slate, an easy lead over their Democratic rivals.

These developments marked the "polling":

The only vote recorded for Mayor McNair for Governor was by a man who switched his vote from Republican to Democrat to do so.

Proportionately few women were voting.

Many men and women were confused because of the large number of candidates.

One-fifth of those who voted for Reed said they were voting mostly "against pinchot."

Two voters said they would never vote for Pinchot while his wife was out making speeches.

Three said they voted for Reed as the Republican candidate because they wanted the Democrats to give him "a good licking in November."

The downtown poll results follow:

REPUBLICANS

DEMOCRATS

United States Senator—Guffey, 8; Taylor, 2.

June Relates Kidnaping, Life in Desert 'Coffin'

(William F. Gettle's own story of his abduction and rescue appears on Page Three.)

By JUNE ROBLES
As told to an International News Service Staff Correspondent.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 15.—I was with Barney (Barney Kengla, her 6-year-old cousin) and we were walking along the street when a tall, dark man come up to me and said:

"Your father is out fixing roads and wants to see you—come with me."

So I got into the car and he drove me for a pretty long ways—I don't know how far, but I guess it was nearly a hundred blocks, and it was getting dark, and we had driven along the sand for quite a ways.

Then the automobile stopped and he said:

"Get out, we aren't going to hurt you."

And then another man came up. I couldn't see him, but he said something to the man who brought me away from town

I don't remember what happened next, only I was in a big box and it was awfully hot .

I couldn't see very well, even in the day time, but I found something to eat.

I ate some figs, dates, graham crackers, oranges and bread, and then there was some water, too, but it didn't taste good. It didn't taste like water, but like slop.

I didn't cry any—that is, not much.

I knew my Grandpa Robles had told me that I mustn't be a cry-baby, and I tried my best, but it was so awful dark, and in the day time the box was so hot I couldn't touch the sides without burning my fingers.

That hurt, and I guess maybe I whimpered a little bit.

Sure I'm glad to get home, and I never want to leave it again.

DAVIS RETURNS TO ARMS MEET

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today ordered Norman H. Davis, American ambassador at large, to return to Geneva for the reconvening of the World Disarmament Conference on May 29.

Davis, who conferred overnight with the President, said he had no new proposition to present to the two-year-old parley.

The administration has assumed the position that it is up to Europe to compose its political difficulties as a solution for the disarmament problem.

In sending Davis back to Geneva, the President appeared disposed to stand by as long as there was a chance for reaching an agreement.

It was indicated strongly that the United States was convinced Europe does not want war and that constituted a hope for some settlement this summer on the arms question.

Weather Conditions

Pressure is low over the eastern states, with centers over the southern extremity of the Appalachian Mountains (Wytheville, 29.90 inches), and in the St. Lawrence Valley (Montreal, 29.90), while a ridge of high pressure overlies the plains states. This distribution of pressure is causing cloudy weather over the eastern portion of the country, and rain in the Ohio Valley and eastward to near the coast. Showers were general yesterday and last night over the Atlantic Coast states, the Ohio Valley and southward over the Gulf states, also over Missouri and Kansas and southward. The skies have now cleared, and the weather is cool over the plains states, and light frost occurred over Wisconsin, Minnesota and in Kansas. In the far West temperatures are rising again.

River Conditions

The rivers are about stationary. Rainfall during the last 24 hours was light over the Allegheny, none reported above Franklin, while over the Monongahela basin generous amounts fell at several gauging points. The heaviest amount is .85-inch at Morgantown. Stage at Franklin is 1.2 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 11.4; Pittsburgh, 10.5; Dam No. 4, 8.7; No. 6, 7.5; No. 10, 8.6, and No. 12, 7.5. The dams are up. The rivers will probably rise slightly. More rain is indicated.

SILVER PARLEY TO BE RENEWED

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—The Senate silver bloc today looked to another conference with President Roosevelt to bring agreement on legislation to improve the economic status of the metal.

Before the week expires, they planned to take to the Chief Executive the tentative program worked out with Secretary Morgenthau calling for nationalization of silver and permissive authority to make huge purchases of silver abroad.

Meanwhile, Senator Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma, persistent champion of inflation, announced his intention of seeking to add a point to the plan, under which June war debt payments could be made in silver.

This was done a year ago under legislation of which Thomas also was the author and which has since expired. The metal was received at a value of 50 cents an ounce, in comparison with the then market price of about 35 cents.

Thomas' idea is to apply the same plan to the coming payments for the purpose both of increasing the nation's store of monetary silver and of easing the disturbed and always controversial war debt situation.

KELLY URGES M'LEOD BILL

Less competition and cutthroat methods in business are in the making and a federal agency will meet the problem, Congressman Clyde Kelly last night told the Retail Credit Men's Association in Kaufmann's dining room.

He stressed his hope in the passage of the McLeod bill, which would release $1,800,000,000 of frozen assets in closed banks, adding:

"That ought to be remedied by the Congress of the United States. That's why I am so much interested in the McLeod bill. We have seven billions in gold in the treasury, five billions in currency in circulation and credit for 16 billions. But we need purchasing power, and that must and will be solved. It is the key to prosperity. We must have customers able to pay and it is for the credit executives of this nation to help work out that problem."

Roosevelt Approves Curb on Utilities

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt today signed the Johnson bill, which prohibits utility companies from going into federal courts to obtain injunctions against enforcement of decisions of state regulatory bodies.

The bill was sponsored by Senator Hiram Johnson (Rep.), of California, who has contended that federal courts have been used by the utility companies to nullify the regulatory work of state commissions and boards.

'SHYLOCK' FIGHT ON BILL BARED BY M'LEOD

Gougers Wait Millions By Payoff Defeat, Depositors Warned

WASHINGTON, May 15.—"Shylocks" stand to make thousands of millions of dollars if closed bank relief legislation is defeated, according to Congressman Clarence J. McLeod, of Michigan.

The author of the McLeod bank payoff bill, speaking on a nationwide radio broadcast last night, said "Shylocks" are waiting for the forced sale of bank assets, and added:

"Many of the greatest fortunes ever accumulated in America have been built upon the ashes of depression. That must not be true after the present depression is conquered. But it will be true unless the government takes control of the closed bank situation."

THRIFTY TO LOSE

He said fortunes would be wrung from the hard-earned savings of those who have deposits in closed banks, unless the government prevents it.

The author of the bill to pay depositors of closed Federal Reserve banks in full at once spoke as he began a new week of effort to obtain the necessary 145 signatures in Congress to bring his bill to a vote in the House.

Discussing the obstacles that have been thrown in the path of his bill, McLeod said:

"It has been frankly admitted by administration leaders in the House that the bill will be passed if allowed to come up for a vote. To frustrate this and prevent the House from voting on this relief legislation, a degree of political hazing and party pressure has been exerted which has never been equaled since I was first elected to Congress in 1920."

CITES OBLIGATION

Congressman McLeod said the government is morally obligated to protect the depositors of closed Federal Reserve banks; that the virtue of thrift long had been preached; that the government organized a campaign urging people to put their money in banks, and the people trustingly put their money in Federal Reserve institutions.

"The story of how these trusting depositors were shamefully duped is now a matter of public record. Testimony of government witnesses before a Senate committee, substantiated by copies of official letters and telegrams which were inserted into the record, shows beyond possibility of contradiction the responsibility of the government to depositors."

McLeod said there is powerful opposititon to the bank pay-off legislation, but that opposition never definitely proclaimed any valid reason for its objection to this type of legislation.

FLOUTS OPPOSITION

Argument that the expense would be tremendous, he said, is based on "fanciful guesses." He added:

"But aside from these frivolous or fanciful objections raised by the opposition, there is a very real reason which may be animating some of our opponents.

"Some individuals or groups stand to make thousands of millions out of the defeat of bank relief legislation. They stand to amass fortunes beside which the fabled treasures of Croesus would be but a drop in the bucket.

"Assets of these closed banks will be sold for the proverbial song if the government does not step in. And, make no mistake about it, there will be those who already have some wealth who will be there to take over the assets."

ARMY AIR QUIZ STILL SEEKING LINDY VIEWS

Flying Colonel Insists Testimony Has Not Yet Been Asked

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who turned down an invitation to serve on a special committee now investigating the Army Air Corps, may yet place his aerial knowledge at its disposal.

The famous flier made known his willingness to testify before the committee if asked—and possibilities appeared strong that a special request would be forwarded.

In fact, authoritative sources familiar with the activities of the committee headed by Newton D. Baker maintained that Lindbergh already had been asked to appear and give the committee aeronnautical data, but that no answer had been receieved from the flier.

This brought a quick reaction from Lindbergh. He said in St. Louis last night that he had not received an invitation.

Members of the committee, who had been described as "disappointed" at Lindbergh's failure to answer the invitation, declined to comment publicly.

Secretary Dern appointed the committee to study the Air Corps and recommend any changes necessary to make it the world's finest. He asked Lindberg to join the group. The Flying Colonel, strongly opposed to the administration's action in taking the air mail from private companies and giving it to the Army, declined in a statement attacking this Roosevelt policy.

Clarence Chamberlin and Maj. James Doolittle, noted fliers, are among members of the committee. It has heard many witnesses in its broad study, which has included a survey of the development of the American air mail.

WOMAN'S DEATH AS SPY TOLD

LA PAZ, Bolivia, May 15.—(AP.)—Reports that a woman spy was executed in Paraguay for furnishing information that lead to an attempt on the President's life caused a sensation today.

The execution was reported in dispatches from the Gran Chaco jungle area over which Bolivia and Paraguay are at war. The government published the reports without comment, although the execution was denied by officials at Paraguay's capital, Asuncion.

The woman—her name was not given—was said to have been convicted of informing the Bolivian command of a flight of President Ayala, of Paraguay to the front. The President received a scare when Bolivian war planes gave chase.

President Ayala, with several other high government officials, escaped the pursuers, the dispatches said, because of the greater speed of the presidential airplane.

Dog Chases Aerial Cash Carriers In Store

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb.—"Spike" is a good bird dog, but a nuisance around Scottsbluff department stores. Store owners have given up attempts to keep him from chasing overhead cash carriers and have appealed to police to take the dog into custody.

"Spike" is apparently unable to distinguish between the whirring cash cups and game birds. He rushes through store aisles in pursuit of speeding objects, paying no attention to customers who might get in his way.

Friend Shot

COUNTESS DELA PORCERIE

'QUEEN' FINDS SUITOR SHOT

NICE, May 15.—(AP.)—Georges Charlot, 27, a professional dancer, was found shot presumably by his own hand today on the grounds of the villa of Countess Dela Porcerie, formerly Mabel Boll, American "Queen of Diamonds."

The dancer was found lying wounded with a revolver in his right hand, by the countess when she returned to the villa at Saint Jean, Capferrat, after a shopping trip to Nice.

The countess, who is divorced from the count, purchased the villa here a few days ago, police said. She is a former friend of Charles Levine, once a passenger in a trans-Atlantic airplane flight.

MAN RENEWS BALM FIGHT

David K. Walters, a mechanic, who alleges that Arthur G. Story stole the love of his wife, Alice H. Walters, is before a jury to make Story pay damages.

The trial began yesterday and will be resumed tomorrow before Judge William H. McNaugher. All of the principals live on Neville sland.

In May, 1931, Walters sued his wife for divorce, but the late Judge Sylvester J. Snee refused him a decree.

The couple was married in 1923 and separated in 1930, at which time Walters alleges that Story began to alienate the affections of his wife. Story took her on automobile trips, the husband charges.

Mrs. Walters and her husband each has two children by a former marriage, and she charged her husband treated his own children better than he did hers, adding:

"But we never got along very well."

She alleges she had her husband arrested once for treating her roughly. Mrs. Walters testified she is living in Story's house in Neville Island and he is paying her board. She denied attending basketball games with Story, except one. Once she went to Warren with him to visit, returning the same day. Both Mrs. Walters and Story denied Walters' allegations.

GIANT HOUSING PLAN FACES U. S. QUIZ

200 Millions Proposed For Modernizing And Building

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—The Senate Banking Committee decided today to hold public hearings beginning tomorrow on the administration bill placing government insurance back of a huge home and building construction and repair program.

Frank C. Walker, head of the National Emergency Council which recommended the project, and John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank which will supervise most of the program, will be the first witnesses.

OPERATION OF PLAN

A big government publicity campaign is planned to awaken the home owner to the possibility of getting his home remodeled or re-conditioned on easy payments. Here is the way it would work:

John Smith wants a new bathroom, to repair the roof, to build an additional wing. If he can do this within $2,000 he is within the plan.

He goes to a bank, a building and loan association or some other institution. The bank or other institution, charges him five per cent and divides the payments on a monthly basis over a five-year period, the limit under the government plan. With interest this would amount to some $40 a month the first year, and less as the $2,000 was reduced and the interest charge declined.

BACKING PROVIDED

In the meantime the lender of the money has informed the government's proposed $200,000,000 insurance corporation that it wishes the loan guaranteed, and the government agrees to pay the lender up to 20 per cent of the loss.

Should Mr. Smith fall down on his payments after turning back $1,000, the government would pay the lender 20 per cent on the second $1,000, and the lender would lose the other $800.

Getting the money may not be as simple as the example sounds because the government will not insure a mortgage not made according to its restrictions. These have not yet been set out. In addition to investigating the prospective borrower's ability to pay, his house will have to conform to certain standards.

PHONE CONTROL BILL SPEEDED

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—The communications bill, designed to put the mammoth wire and wireless systems under unified federal regulation, began a swift journey through the Senate today. Passage within a day or two was forecast.

Chairman Dill (Dem.), of Washington, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, in introducing the bill, unfolded a formal report on it declaring, among other things, that regulation of the "telephone monopoly" has been "practically nil."

A bi-partisan five-man board, named by the President at salaries of $10,000 would regulate the communications systems, taking over existing powers of the Federal Radio Commission over radio and the Interstate Commerce Commission over telephone and telegraph.

Roosevelt Veto Ready For 30-Hour Week

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—President Roosevelt is prepared to veto a mandatory 30-hour week bill for industry, members of the House Labor Committee heard today as the campaign for a vote on the measure continued.

The President is said to be confident of the ability of the NRA to solve the question of a shorter work week for industry through codes.

Despite these reports, Chairman Connery (Dem.), of Massachusetts, of the House Labor Committee, is waging a fight to fill a petition of 145 names and thus insure action in the House. The Senate passed a 30-hour week bill at the last session but the House sidetracked it for the Recovery Act.

Speaker Rainey declined to oppose the action, but Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader, urged the House to refrain from bringing "more controversial issues" before it because hope for an early adjournment might be blocked. Rainey said:

"I understood some time ago that the administration believed the matter of a shorter work week could best be handled through codes. I have heard nothing since."

The American Federation of Labor, allied with Connery in the fight, is slated to begin "back home pressure" on members of Congress. Connery said:

"I am sure we will get the vote. The telegrams ought to begin rolling in from 'back home' about now."

WORRY OVER FAMILY WORST OF ORDEAL, GETTLE SAYS

OIL MAN TELLS OF KIDNAPING AND RESCUE

Blindfolded and Bound Five Days in Hot Den

(William F. Gettle today told the story of his kidnaping to officers and reporters.)

By WILLIAM F. GETTLE
As Told to Officers and an International News Service Correspondent.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 15. —I thank God that I am safe and the news of this terrible experience has been kept from my children.

As I lay there, blindfolded for five days, I worried about my wife, as she had not been well for some time. Of course I worried about the children, but my wife's condition was a never-ending source of fear. The children are young and suspense is never very deadly in childhood.

My captors did not threaten me with either death or torture, and I wasn't particularly worried about myself. I did what they wanted me to.

It was awfully hot. I was never allowed to get off the bed except when they led me to the bathroom. My leg pained me considerably and one of the men rubbed it with alcohol.

LEG HURT IN FALL

The leg was hurt when I fell from the wall and at first I thought it was broken as it was doubled under me. One of the men told me not to be soft and that I wouldn't be hurt if I didn't make an outcry.

We rode about 45 minutes, and I don't know why but I thought we were in the vicinity of Riverside. When we finally stopped the men lifted me out of the car and shoved me up the steps of a house. They made me lie down on the bed.

They took off the adhensive tape which was over my eyes and put on another blindfold or mask. This was changed twice a day.

Mostly they left me alone. They never conversed in my presence and when they talked in the other room it was in whispers. I couldn't tell day from night, except that at some times it seemed hotter than others and I assumed that was the day.

I wasn't hungry, but they told me I could have sandwiches whenever I wanted anything to eat.

THOUGHT OF ESCAPE

I thought of escape, but I had no chance. My captors never left me alone and although my hands were untied they didn't permit me to fumble with the ropes on my feet or with the blindfold.

They removed the blindfold for a while and had me copy off the notes they had written. I wrote the note in which the $60,000 was asked for. They said if there was any argument about it they would double it, so I wrote all the notes.

The "boss man" was plenty hard boiled. When he came into the room to talk to me he always had a sheet over his head.

I don't remember seeing or hearing any women around there.

RANSOM NEGOTIATIONS

From time to time I was told that ransom negotiations were being made, but I was kept in the dark regarding most of the details. Last night, I didn't know what night it was, one of the men whispered to me:

"Well, old boy, we're getting ready to take you home. Everything is going to be okay."

Hours later, it seemed, they told me the scheme had blown up, and that I would have to wait until they could arrange another plan.

When the officers burst into the house I didn't know what was happening. When the blindfold was taken from me I guess I was in a daze. My eyes hurt terribly when I was taken into the light. My leg doesn't hurt me much now, but the pain was intense for the first two days.

Caught in a Trap

MISS THELMA MITCHEN, 22 . . . . HELD IN BANK ROBBERY

Miss Mitchen, caught with two men at Richmond, Ind., in a trap deputies had carefully laid for John Dillinger. Anyhow, the three will be sent—they're waiving extradition—to Springfield, O., to face charges growing out of bank robbery and murder recently. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

Kidnaped Millionaire Rescued, 5 Suspects Held

Gettle Back Home Unharmed and Unransomed

the two women, Loretta Woody and Joan Burke, now in custody.

Williams, in his statement, said he and Kirk were the two men who kidnaped Gettle.

They arrested five persons in connection with the kidnaping, which occurred five days ago.

Gettle, haggard but smiling, said today:

"It all seemed like a bad dream.

"My greatest worry while I lay bound hand and foot on that bed was for the anxiety my absence would cause my wife and family."

Mrs. Gettle, an invalid, when word of the rescue was given her, murmured:

"I thank God!"

Gettle's rescue came unexpectly following an unsuccessful attempt early yesterday to pay $60,000 ransom in exchange for his safe return to his wife and four small children.

KIDNAPERS' MISTAKE

The alleged kidnapers, even before the crime had been perpetrated, made the mistake which led to last night's arrests and the return of Gettle.

Five weeks ago they attracted attention of the police robbery detail by their activities in an apartment house at 600 North Harvard street. The officers were seeking a band of bank robbers. They placed recording devices in the apartment rented by the suspects.

But results were lacking. Officers were ready to give up last Saturday when one of the records, rerun in police quarters, scratched out this conversation:

"There's no need to be scared any longer. Things are in pretty good shape. The newspapers look favorable. I understand no one can tap a pay telephone line."

While police, Sheriff's deputies and District Attorney's operatives buzzed somberly over the ransom payment failure, Capt. Harry Seager and Lieut. H. P. Gearhard bided their time at the apartment.

At the proper moment, when hopes waned at the Gettle mansion, the law struck. Jimmy Kirk and two women, Loretta Woody and Joan Burke, were arrested. From Kirk they obtained the address of the kidnap house where Gettle was held.

The news of Gettle's return spread quickly as one suspect after another was brought in. Before Gettle had been taken to the Sheriff's homicide bureau a large crowd had gathered.

It took 10 minutes for officers to push Gettle safely through the mob into the house where his bedridden wife and four children greeted him.

A touching reunion followed. Mrs. Gettle, who had collapsed after her husband's abduction, had been prepared by Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz for Settle's safe return.

The children's who had frequently asked, "When will daddy be back?" danced around him happily, rather surprised at all the commotion. They had not been told of the kidnaping.

Burton Fitts, District Attorney, said legal action against the five suspects and others they are seeking, would be started today. He said:

"We will seek at least life sentences for every person involved."

In the meantime authorities were questioning each of the prisoners, in an effort to determine who had "put the finger" on Gettle.

SAVED FROM GRAVE

The child was literally rescued from the grave. Her prison was a boxlike hole dug in the desert, nine and a half miles from her home. It had virtually the same dimensions as a grave, except for depth, being six feet long, three feet deep and two and a half feet wide.

Over the grave—it might indeed have been a grave had the rescue been much longer delayed—was a roof of cacti, tin and burlap, crudely put together. There were several holes in the roof, and the sun burned down to make the pit, despite the covering of cacti, a sweltering inferno by day, a chill, horrifying tomb by night. The child's uncle said:

"Only the fact that she was always a robust child permitted her to go through 19 days and nights of such imprisonment."

When they found her she was ill and too weak to walk. She appeared calm, but the horrors of her experiences had written themselves upon her. Only after days of quiet and medical care will it be determined how seriously those experiences may have affected her.

The barbarity of the girl's kidnapers was without present-day parallel.

CALMLY SUCKS ORANGE

She was neither frightened nor timid when her rescuers arrived. As Houston made an opening in the heavy top that had been built over the hole, and looked down upon the child whose fate had been a question mark for nearly three weeks, she was calmly sucking an orange. He called down softly:

"Do you know me, honey?"

With childlike leisureliness she glanced up and looked the attorney carefully over, turned her attention again to the orange and said:

"No."

Houston, using the child's own nickname for her Uncle Carlos, who came hurrying up, asked:

"Do you know 'Lechi?'"

"Oh, yes!"

The covering over the hole was heavy, and Houston was unable to get through it immediately. He found a key which lay on a piece of tin near the hole. The letter of directions from Chicago had described the spot where the key would be found.

He tossed the key down to June, who unlocked the padlock which gripped the chains tightly about her ankles. She stood up shakily, the chains falling away, and held up her arms to be lifted out.

The kidnapers had provided a jug of water, some wilted oranges and vegetables, and a loaf of bread.

'I WANT MY MAMMA'

The child's first thought when lifted from the hole was for her mother, just as for 19 weary days and nights her mother's thoughts had been for her. June cried:

"I want my mamma!"

It was the nearest she came to giving way to emotion during the rescue.

When reassured that she would be taken at once to "mamma," June expressed anxiety over one other matter: her report card. She had it with her, and pointed proudly to the marks she had been given at school.

Her captors, the girl said, were two men—"Bill" and "Will" were the names they used in addressing each other, she said. They came to her desert prison occasionally, bringing water and food. With a child's aptness for detail, she mentioned that one of the men wore gloves.

The letter of instructions which led to the girl's rescue read like a terasure map. After directing the rescuers to proceed out Broadway to Wilmont and there turn south on Rincon way, the letter said to drive east a mile and then "walk 150 steps north." Following the instructions, the two men came finally upon the earth prison late yesterday afternoon.

'ARE YOU DEAD, HONEY?'

Houston went ahead, fearful that the girl might be dead, in which event he sought to spare the girl's uncle. The sight of the child calmly sucking an orange changed his fears to thanksgiving. However, he asked:

"Are you dead, honey?"

The answer being obvious, June did not deign to dignify it with a reply.

So quickly did word of the rescue spread that hundreds of happy Tucson citizens swarmed about the Robles home. A space finally had to be roped off to keep the crowd back.

In response to the cries of the crowd the father of the child came on to the porch, smiling happily and with June in his arms. She threw kisses to the crowd and seemed to enjoy the excitement.

WELCOME HOME

Mrs. Helen Robles, the mother who had been almost distracted with fear and worry during the days of uncertainty as to the child's fate, wept unrestrainedly and nearly fainted when the girl was placed in her arms. She showered June with kisses, and clung to her hungrily.

June asked for her bunnies as soon as she was put on a bed in the same dress, now torn and dirty, in which she was kidnaped. She did not appear tired, and objected to being put to bed. She played with her bunnies, and with her paper dolls. No attempt was made to question her about her experiences.

A physician who examined her said she must be kept quiet for many days, and shielded from excitement.

The child safely home, the efforts of the law—which had been held in leash during part of the time she was missing so that the Robles family could negotiate with the abductors—were focussed on the capture of the kidnapers.

Rescuer Near Collapse At June's "Living Grave"

International News Service.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 15.—"Honey, are you dead?"

An exhausted man called these words down into a living grave dug into the desert nine miles east of Tucson.

A childish voice came back:

"Why, no—who are you?"

And Clarence Houston, the county attorney from Tucson, knew that June Robles, missing 19 days since she was "snatched" for a $15,000 ransom, was alive.

Houston, who had searched three hours under the blazing desert sun, is a cured tubercular patient. When he finally found the girl he was at the point of collapse.

The dramatic combing of the desert was instituted on a tip contained in a letter mailed May 10 from Chicago to Gov. B. B. Moeur. This tip, like hundreds of others, was run down methodically.

Finally Houston found the crude cage of corrugated iron, rabbit wire and to by four scantlings, buried under sand and cacti trash.

WOMAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

At 3:10 a. m. today an excited young man rapped on the door of a house in East End's Kirkwood street and asked the woman who answered the door to call the police.

Outside in the street a young woman lay unconscious.

The police took her to Homeopathic Hospital. She was listed as Florence Davis, 28. It is believed she rooms in North Negley avenue, near Penn avenue.

There were indications that she had been thrown from an auto. She was suffering from shock and contusions.

The police report made no mention of the name of the young man who had asked for the police. Two license numbers of cars seen near Negley avenue and Kirkwood street were reported.

The young woman's landlady said that she had left the house last night with another girl.

Girl Happy, Saved Dress From Flames

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 15.—(AP.)—Although nearly all the belongings of her family were destroyed in a fire which wrecked their home, Ruth Woebkenberg, 9, is happy.

She remembered a new dress, purchased for her first communion, and left beside her bed. Dashing back into the house, she brought out the dress triumphantly.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO VISIT BABY

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt expects to visit her new grandchild, Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, daughter of Elliot, while the President goes voyaging this summer.

She told her press conference that she would meet her husband when he lands on the West Coast, probably at Seattle, and would make the return train trip with him, visiting en route various federal projects in which he is interested.

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized that summer vacation plans are unsettled; but as nearly as can be judged now, the President will sail from Hyde Park about June 26, after attending, if possible, the Harvard-Yale races. Franklin, Jr., is on the Harvard freshman crew squad.

The President's two sons, Franklin, Jr., and John, will go with him on his trip to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and through the Panama Canal to Hawaii, returning probably to Seattle.

Farmer Fault Finder, Star's Suit Asserts; Claims Baby

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—(AP.)—Gloria Swanson charges in a suit for divorce that Michael Farmer, fier Irish sportsman husband, persistently found fault with her and kept her awake nights with quarreling.

As a result of Farmer's fault-finding while she was engaged in working at a studio, she became nervous and was unable to portray her roles propertly, the motion picture star asserted in her suit, filed yesterday.

Miss Swanson said Farmer found fault with her friends to such an extent that he caused her humiliation and embarrassment in public.

The actress said there was no community property, and she asked for the custody of their child, aged 2, now being cared for in Switzerland.

The couple married in Westchester County, New York, August 16, 1931, and repeated the ceremony in Yuma, Ariz., November 9, of the same year. They separated last December 10, the complaint recited.

Friends of the couple in Hollywood said they understood Farmer, who is now in Europe, might not contest the divorce suit, but he had indicated he would fight to obtain the custody of the child.

Formal announcement that Miss Swanson and Farmer, whom she married secretly in New York in 1931, had decided to live apart, was made April 23 by the actress, who said their interests were incompatible. Since then her name has been linked in a possible romance involving a prominent actor with whom she has been seen in public here and in New York.

Farmer is the fourth husband of Miss Swanson. Her first was Wallace Beery, movie actor. Her second was the late Herbert Somborn, cafe owner, by whom a child was born. Her third husband was the Marquis de la Falaise, present husband of Constance Bennett.

TRAP FATHER IN KILLING

CANONSBURG, Pa., May 15.—Charged with murder, Nick John, 60, who in a fit of rage, it is alleged, killed his son-in-law and wounded two others here Sunday night, today was believed to be trapped in the vicinity of Bellaire, O., by a police net covering three states.

While search for the missing man narrowed, his widowed 16-year-old daughter, Mrs. Virginia Felluzis, remained in seclusion, dazed by her suddenly tangled life, and his wife, suffering from a nervous collapse, was confined to her bed.

Meanwhile, Gus George, of East Liverpool, who, police say, was forced by John at the point of a pistol to drive him from the scene immediately following the shooting, returned to his home, and an information charging John with murder was made before Alderman Thomas Reese by County Detective Frank Creps.

Questioned by police, George told of driving John to the outskirts of Bellaire by a roundabout route, and repeatedly protested his innocence of complicity.

Judge W. Heber Dithrich in Criminal Court paroled Edward Williams, 33, of St. Louis, for two years on a charge of embezzlement and directed him to make restitution. He was accused of taking $2,000 from the Conservation Credit System.

Film Stars Help Greet Gettle's Return Home

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 15.—(AP.)—The dramatic return of William F. Gettle, millionaire, from a kidnapers' hideout was greeted with tumult and shouting from several hundred persons of this exclusive colony of movie personages and men of wealth.

In the crowd were John Barrymore and his wife, Dolores Costello; Winnie Lightner, Leslie Howard, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crawford.

As policemen drove up with Gettle to his home just across the street from that of Edmund Lowe, movie actor, the crowd applauded and yelled. Police held them back while Gettle, a weary-looking but willing subject, posed for numerous flashlight "shots" by cameramen.

Gettle stood patiently while his invalid wife, torn by five days of anxiety for his safety, looked out from an upstairs room. Finally he was escorted in. The crowd almost mobbed him in congratulation. Cries of "Bill, Bill!" came from the upstairs window.

Inside Gettle's four children yelped with joy about "Daddy" being home. They thought he had been on a trip.

Once Mr. and Mrs. Gettle paused in their own rejoicing to dispatch a telegram of congratulations to the parents of June Robles, 6-year-old Tucson (Ariz.) girl, who was found yesterday after being held in a kidnapers' cave for 19 days.

FIGHT TO SAVE BOY FAILS

Death today had claimed 8-year-old Jimmy Kenney, of 91 North Jackson street, Bellevue, despite a valiant fight by physicians at Suburban General Hospital to save his life.

Jimmy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kenney, was sitting on the curb in front of his home when the wheel of a passing automobile crushed his leg against the curb, according to police.

A call was sent out for volunteers and from among more than a dozen youths Frank Thornton, 24, of 639 Tingley avenue, Bellevue, engineering student at the University of Pittsburgh, was selected.

Baby Fights Death, Condition Unchanged

The condition of a 2-week-old baby in the Children's Hospital, who was given a 50-50 chance for life following a belated blood transfusion Friday, remained unchanged today, according to hospital attaches.

The transfusion was performed after a 22-hour wait during which repeated broadcasts for volunteers over the police radio station, WPDU, were made.

CAPITAL EYES PRIMARY RACE IN PENNA.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A Democratic administration looked to Republican Pennsylvania today to furnish an indication as to which way the political winds are blowing—whether for or against the New Deal.

Pennsylvania primaries are always politically significant, but this year's is being watched with more than the usual interest by politicians of both parties. The New Deal has been the principal issue between Senator David A. Reed and Gov. Gifford Pinchot in their bitter battle for the Republican senatorial nomination.

Reed, conservative and long a spokesman for the Mellon organization in Keystone State politics, is one of the New Deal's most outspoken critics. Pinchot, with a background of progressiveism that dates back to the days of "T. R.," is an ardent champion of most of the policies that Washington has been pursuing since March of 1933.

The Democrats of Pennsylvania have a number of spirited contests of their own that will be decided by today's balloting, but the attention of the White House and of Washington generally is riveted on the Reed-Pinchot battle.

The outcome is being watched with anxious interest by Congress especially. All 435 members of the House are up for re-election, and some 34 members of the Senate as well. Many of them are facing hard primary battles for renomination—just the kind of battles that are being waged in Pennsylvania.

If Reed wins, a good many of these members are going to conclude that it is politically "safe" to speak their minds about the New Deal, for Reed certainly has been doing so. By the same token, if Reed loses a good many of them are going to speak softly concerning the NRA, the AAA, and other alphabetical components of the administration program.

The Democratic senatorial contest lies between "Joe" Guffey, national committeeman, and chief patronage dispenser, and Roland S. Morris, an old-time Democrat who was ambassador to Japan in the Wilson administration. In this contest, the administration professes to have no choice, although National Chairman "Jim" Farley feels grateful to Guffey for the aid he gave him in the early days of the Roosevelt candidacy.

JAIL AVERTED BY M'CLOSKEY

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., May 15.—(AP.)—Although forced to reinstate Detective John Carroll, under threat of going to jail, Mayor Eddie McCloskey says the incident is by no means closed—asserts he's going to fire Carroll anyway.

The detective, discharged by McCloskey about a year ago, took his case to court and the judge ordered the officer reinstated. After the Mayor failed to respect the court order he was arrested yesterday.

Three judges in County Court informed the former pugilist "You will sign this order for reinstatement or stand committed."

Candidates' Confidence Shown in 'Last Words'

Associated Press.

The "final words" of major candidates in Pennsylvania's political contest as the voters went to the polls today were:

SENATORIAL

DAVID A. REED, Republican—The campaign is over; my nomination is certain. The only question is the size of the majority by which Pennsylvanians will tell Gov. Pinchot his political career is finished.

JOSEPH F. GUFFEY, Democrat—I predict that the ticket of the Roosevelt democracy, including George H. Earle, for Governor; Thomas Kennedy, for Lieutenant Governor; Thomas A. Logue, for Secretary of Internal Affairs; Chester H. Rhodes, for Justice of the Superior Court, and myself, for the United States Senate, will receive at least 75 per cent of the votes cast in the Democratic primary.

ROBERT GRAY TAYLOR, Republican and Democratic—I have visited 62 counties—only superficially to be sure. I looked for the kind of people who are seeking the truth. I can represent them better than my four millionaire adversaries.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, Republican (By His Secretary)—My last-minute checkups from every corner of the state make me absolutely confident that, based upon the extremely conservative estimates, Gifford Pinchot will be nominated by a margin of at least 200,000 votes.

GUBERNATORIAL

WILLIAM A. SCHNADER, Republican—I shall be the next Governor.

CHARLES J. MARGIOTTI, Republican—The old professional politicians in Pennsylvania are the prophets of despair. They promise you nothing—they can give you nothing. I cannot believe our people are satisfied with conditions as they are. The times demand a change, and I promise you a change. I will be nominated.

EDWARD C. SHANNON, Republican—I will go over the top at 7 a. m. and report victory at 7 p. m.

TMOMAS W. PHILLIPS, JR., Republican — Republicans, make your party what you want it to be and what it should be—a progressive, aggressive, militant party.

BENJAMIN G. EYNON, Republican (By His Campaign Manager)—I am confident that it will be proven that vast sums of money need not be spent to elect a candidate, and that the voters are coming to respect a candidate that seeks their support on qualifications and not on criticizing the platforms or qualifications of others.

Indians Get Bed, Sleuth Made 'Chief'

KANSAS CITY, Kan., May 15.—(AP.) — Capt. Stanley Beatty brought several families of Indians to court—and thereby became "Wa-tau-su" or Big Brave.

The Indians, taking part in a festival, found their tepees too cold and wet and asked to sleep in the city jail. Capt. Beatty led them instead to the courtroom where they spent the night on benches. And for his hospitality, the redskins made Beatty a chief.

Phillips, Butler; William A. Schnader, Philadelphia; Jay W. Sechler, Philadelphia; Edward C. Shannon, Columbia; George A. Welsh, Lima.

ALIBI DISPUTED IN GIRL SLAYING

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15.—(AP.)—Despite his alibi claim, Millard Hickman, 45-year-old marine engineer, was under indictment here today on a charge of murdering Louise Jeppesen, pretty Ogden (Utah) girl.

The indictment was returned less than 48 hours after the 23-year-old girl's broken body was discovered in a pedestrian tunnel in Golden Gate Park.

Police charge that Hickman took Miss Jeppesen to the secluded spot and there strangled her after attacking and beating her.

Hickman, through his attorney, Harry V. McKenzie, denied all knowledge of the slaying and declared Miss Jeppesen, a Saturday night party companion, left his hotel apartment at 3 a. m. Sunday. At 4 a. m. the approximate hour her body was found, Hickman declared he was in his apartment with another woman.

Miss Blanche McKay, 25, told police Hickman came to her hotel early Sunday and took her to his apartment. She remained with him until that afternoon, she said.

Search for Cause of Fast Tread Wear Results in Greatest Tire That Ever Bore the Goodyear Name

TREADS were wearing out too fast, said reports which began to come in from the field some time ago. Not only competitive treads—but even ours.

It was a puzzling situation. Nobody could find out why. Then, expert research pegged the cause—the new automobiles! More powerful, easier to drive at high speeds, faster stopping, this performance required more of all tires—Goodyears and other makes as well.

Goodyear Headquarters demanded, "Make a tire that can 'take it.'" And after months of patient research, finishing up with a grueling day-and-night "brake battle" on the test cars, the Goodyear men delivered the "G-3" All-Weather.

16% more non-skid blocks. (Goodyear puts its famous non-skid blocks in the center of the tread where they are needed more than ever for traction and safety on smooth modern highways.)

11½% wider riding-ribs; grooves are narrower.

Blocks and ribs are nested closer; "squirming" of the tread under pressure is reduced. "Cupping" and "heel-and-toe" wear is reduced 50%.

Frankly, these great improvements could not have been accomplished without Supertwist, the extra-durable, extra-elastic cord fabric upon which the Goodyear carcass is built. For the wider tread puts extra strain upon the carcass, and Supertwist stands that strain!

In the "G-3" All-Weather you get a tire in which tread and carcass work together for longer life—longer wear.

See the "G-3" and you'll agree that Goodyear stepped out ahead again—and set a new standard of value for tire buyers! A better tire—at no extra price.

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, INC.

LOOK RIGHT HERE

Watch the rest of the industry try to copy this amazing tire. Watch them try to duplicate Goodyear's claims. But, remember, you have to have "non-skid" before you can have "non-skid mileage." And to have "non-skid," you have to have GRIP where you see it here—GRIP in the center of the tread—the place where it counts, because it's the spot where the tire contacts the road. Look at the grip on this Goodyear Tire and ask yourself why buy any tire that lacks this safety?

515,000 FLOCK TO POLLS IN COUNTY

vious years, was in danger of losing its reputation; only one clash—and that verbal—was reported there.

Alexander Martin, judge of the Fourth District in the Second Ward, was brought into court and reprimanded after Judge Marshall had received complaints that unnecessary assistance was being given voters.

Quite to the contrary, from the Fourth District of the First Ward, came elderly John Garey with a complaint that he was not allowed assistance. He pleaded that he couldn't see well, his glasses being broken. Judge Marshall sent him to the Registration Commission to have the word "disability" written on his registration card.

Owing to the rain, the voting got under way slowly as the polls opened at 7 a. m., eastern standard time, but there was expected to be a rush to vote before the polls close at 7 p. m., eastern standard time.

The rain was expected to bring out the farmers' vote in the outlying districts.

POLICE IN RESERVE

City police expected few disorders during the election, but Supt. Ben R. Marshall ordered reserve details of police at all stations in the event of an emergency.

Marshall said the recent elections convictions in Federal Court were expected to tame the hoodlums, who, in former years, have terrorized polling places in the Second, Third and Fifth Wards.

For the first time since the Guthrie administration, 26 years ago, city police and firemen were not under orders to hustle for votes for administration candidates.

Marshall stated:

"The police who were detailed to the various polling places are to mind their own business as to the election. Their duties are to preserve order."

70,000 WATCHERS

Approximately 70,000 watchers were scattered at the polling places throughout the county to look out for the interests of the various candidates.

The fight between Gov. Gifford Pinchot and Senator David A. Reed for the Republican nomination for the Senate held the center of the stage in the primary.

Attorney General William A. Schnader and Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon each was receiving organized Republican support. Thomas W. Phillips and Charles J. Margiotti were receiving strong backing from independent elements.

More than 120 substitutes were appointed by Quarter Sessions Court yesterday.

DEMOCRATIC GAINS

Of the voters enrolled in Pittsburgh, 100,000 are Republicans and 85,828 Democrats. In the rest of the county, however, the Democrats failed to hold that close ratio.

The enrollment in the boroughs showed 153,284 Republicans and 40,114 Democrats; in the townships, 78,865 Republicans and 24,362 Democrats, and in the third class cities of McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton, 22,592 Republicans and 7,039 Democrats.

Anticipating a record vote owing to the large number of candidates and the number of electors, Director of Elections John M. Henry issued a plea to the voters to cast their ballots early.

ADVICE TO VOTERS

He said:

"With the bulk of the voting occurring in the morning and evening, those who can cast their ballots during the middle of the day should show consideration for their fellow citizens by availing themselves of that opportunity."

Henry declared that election officers are powerless to extend the time for closing the polls, 7 p. m. eastern standard time. He said:

"When that hour arrives, only those who are in the booths or qualified and within the guard rail may vote."

Legally only four voters can be qualified and inside the rail at one time.

All state liquor stores and all places selling liquor and beer by the drink, except chartered clubs, were closed all day today.

Restaurants, hotels and other places where drinkers congregate were required by law to close at 2 a. m. and remain closed until 7 a. m. tomorrow.

IRVING MILLEN CALLED DUNCE

International News Service.

DEDHAM, Mass., May 15.—Irving Millen, pleading insanity at his murder trial, today heard himself described as a dunce by a former school teacher and as stupid by his former employer and aids.

Irving, who recently made a vain attempt to break jail, grinned through his defense testimony as he sat manacled in the prisoner's iron cage to his fellow defendants, Murton Millen and Abe Faber. They are charged with the murder of two policemen during the holdup of the Needham Trust Company.

Sarah Rosenbaum, Irving's school teacher, testified the defendant was a "poor student" who never got beyond the low seventh grade.

New Deal Verdict Rests With Pa. Voters

TEST IN G. O. P.

For, it is in the Republican camp that United States Senator David A. Reed, striving for renomination on the strength of his anti-New Deal record, is pitted against Gov. Gifford Pinchot, one of the earliest and one of the staunchest advocates of the Roosevelt ian doctrines and practices.

The din of campaign attacks, charges, denials and claims rang in the ears of the voters as they trooped to the polling booths.

Leading aspirants to nominations of both Republicans and Democratic parties closed their campaign activities last night with predictions of victory, as well as last-minute appeals for support.

Managers of the Reed campaign declared their candidate will triumph over the Governor by a statewide majority of 250,000. Philadelphia alone, the Reed men claimed, will accord the Senator a majority of 125,000.

PINCHOT'S CLAIM

Duncan McCallum, the Governor's secretary, ccountered the Reed claims with the assertion that a survey of all counties indicates Pinchot will amass a 200,000 majority over the Senator.

It was evident that, while Reed is depending largely on the conservative electorates of the big cities where political organization is well grounded, Pinchot relies on the anthracite and bituminous coal regions and the agricultural areas. While Philadelphia may accord Reed a huge majority, this may be overcome by the returns from the coal and farming counties where Pinchot's aggressive and progressive ideas have enabled him to erect potent organizations.

CHANCE GIVEN FOUR

With 10 active candidates competing for this honor, only four are generally conceded a chance to win. These are Attorney General William A. Schnader, Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon, Charles J. Margiotti, Punxsutawney attorney, and former Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, liberal and independent millionaire oil man, of Butler.

Because of their large personal followings two other G. O. P. gubernatorial aspirants may roll up a heavy vote which might affect the outcome of the contest among the four leading candidates. These two are State Secretary of Agriculture John A. McSparran, outspoken prohibitionist, and Benjamin G. Eynon, of Scranton. McSparran, enjoying the official backing of the state's prohibition organization, is running on both the Republican and Democratic tickets.

SCHNADER CONFIDENT

Schnader, indorsed by the Vare-Grundy-Mellon organization, issued a statement this morning, confidently asserting:

"I will be the next Governor of Pennsylvania. The Republican party, united as it has not been for years, will march forward to victory. United in strength, united in spirit, united in purpose our party cannot lose. So, we shall triumph in November as we have in the past."

This prediction of a Republican victory in the fall general election was totally ignored by Democratic leaders, busily engaged in an internecine feud such as the state's Jeffersonians have not witnessed in years.

Hopeful that Pennsylvania, the old citadel of Republicanism, will demolish tradition and place the Democrats in the seats of power next November, the two outstanding factions of the minority party carried their battle for ballots right down to the campaigning deadline.

DEMOCRATIC PLEAS

Both the organization and the anti-organization camps appealed to the citizenry to support them as the surest way to approve and strengthen the policies of President Roosevelt. Both issued last-minute claims of impending victory.

The organization primary ticket, indorsed by the State Democratic Committee, is headed by National Committeeman Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, for Senator, and George H. Earle, of Haverford, for Governor.

Opposing the organization slate is an aggressive list of candidates led by Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, for Senator, and Judge Charles D. Copeland, of Greensburg, for Governor.

The big issue in the Democratic struggle which the voters are deciding today is the question of party leadership. The high probability of a Democratic victory in November accounts for the intensity of the rivalry between the Guffey-Earle and the Morris-Copeland factions.

As Roosevelt patronage dispenser in the state, Guffey has built a following which bids well to swing him into the senatorial nomination. But, Morris, a veteran Democratic leader who served as Woodrow Wilson's ambassador to Japan, is widely popular among voters of the eastern portion of the state, while Copeland, his running mate, is possessed of immense following in the western counties.

COX BOLTS PINCHOT

A spectacular feature of the last hours of the campaign was the defection from the Pinchot ranks of the Rev. James R. Cox, of Pittsburgh, state chaplain of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who led the march of the unemployed to Washington two years ago. In a speech at Pittsburgh last night Father Cox coupled a scathing denunciation of the Governor with an appeal to his friends and followers to cast their ballots for Reed.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH WANT-ADS BRING RESULTS

Through the Spyglass

Viewing the New

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your SPYGLASS. FOR THE reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

What windfalls of news we've had descend upon us! A few more days like today and our poor old head will feel like the stockroom of a department store looks!

Anyway . . . when out of the maelstrom comes an item like the little golf bags we've discovered, we feel all the hullabaloo is worth it. For these are little pouches of washable white grain leather with zipper tops . . . and six little red wooden tees upon which to plant your ball whilst swatting . . . with a coin pocket snapped on one side and plenty of room inside for a handkie and the inevitable lipstick. $1.00

* * *

Hard to say just when it's wise to talk about fur scarfs and when to keep quiet on the subject . . . what with the temperature going into chills and fever as rapidly as it has. But . . . .

When a shop crashes through with wolf and fox scarfs that used to be upwards to $25 for only $9.95, that's something!

Very decentish ones, too . . . that will take you through cooler days this Summer very nobly. Greys, reds, browns.

* * *

Double or nothing! Apparently this is the order of the day, because it's TWINS everywhere you go. Especially twinnish are the sweater and skirt outfits that are flaunting their pastel and whites around the sports department of one store!

Twine twins, these . . . of the cotton cord that holds a tender spot in hearts this season. Twin sweaters with matching skirt . . . and a very goodlooking job they make of you, too. In a waffle stitch that is as good to look at as its namesake is to eat! Three pieces for $2.98 (when, we might add, mere two-pieces are selling for $3.98!). Figure out the remarkable angle of this for yourself and leave everything (the dishes in the sink, yea, even this!) in order to get there NOW!

* * *

Shine up your fingertips! Polish up your paws . . . and do it so easily now that one of our emporiums is yodeling around their swellish manicure sets that come at 98 cents.

Sets that are all done up in a rectangular case of grain leather, black or brown, with a zipper zipping it closed . . . with medium and rose polish, cuticle remover, polish remover, emery, file, orange stick, and cotton all planted in their proper places inside. And for 2 cents more ($1.00) you can have a case exactly like this that includes a white-pencil for making nice tips on your lily-whites!

FRANCE HONORS AL WILLIAMS

Capt. Al Williams, famous speed and stunt flier, has been invited by the French government to bring his speed plane to Paris this summer, to represent America in the international aeronautical show.

A veteran of the United States naval air forces, Capt. Williams held the world's speed record for eight consecutive years. On one occasion, to ascertain the effect of extreme speed on various parts of an aircraft, he deliberately flew a plane to complete destruction without a parachute.

He has been awarded the coveted Navy Cross for extraordinary services performed in the naval air forces.

Job Rule Declined By Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—The Supreme Court has refused to rule on the validity of the statute under which federal classified civil service employes may be removed without a court hearing.

The question was raised by George E. Golding, who was removed in August, 1930, while special agent at Albany, N. Y., in charge of special agents of the prohibition bureau.

TASTY TREATS FOR MIDNIGHT SUPPERS

For a real midnight supper, Prudence Penny recommends deviled shrimp in popovers, today's first prize, but if you'd prefer something lighter there are plenty of other available recipes.

Araby spice cake or strawberry pie de luxe, together with a cup of steaming hot coffee, will pleasantly help relieve the tension caused by election night. Or if you don't feel like eating much, you'll prefer banana-apricot mousse or moonbeam parfait.

And for dinner this evening you might serve ham slices en casserole to make the family forget their political differences.

Eating is a daily problem with which Prudence Penny is chiefly concerned. In the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph she awards six prizes for the best recipes sent in. No recipes are returned.

CONVENIENCE? ECONOMY? LOW PRICE? BEAUTY?

BEAUTY is unmistakable—in the white lacquer or porcelain exteriors . . . the new, modern and simple design . . . the acid-resisting porcelain lining that keeps the interior of the box ever bright.

Things I Never Knew About Detroit

It is the oldest city between the Allegheny Mountains and New Mexico.

It is the only city in the United States that is north of Canada.

The Detroit River does not run north and south as appears on most maps, but almost on a direct line east to west.

Detroit is in Wayne County and Wayne County originally included Chicago, which was a suburb of Detroit.

Cadillac, who founded Detroit in 1701, was the city's first bootlegger. He was taken to Montreal to stand trial for violating the King's edict against selling rum to the Indians. They were getting it, anyway, from traders, and Cadillac arranged to let them have half a pint at a time to be consumed on the premises.

Detroit had six other names before it was finally decided to call it Detroit, in 1824. They were Yondetega, Wawehmong, Tegsaghfondie, Teuchsa, Grondle, Karowtaen and Fort Pontchartrain.

Detroit encloses two island cities—Highland Park and Hamtramck. Both are entirely surrounded by the City of Detroit, but maintain separate municipal governments as well as police and fire departments.

The first tunnel between two nations was the Michigan Central R. R. tunnel between Detroit and Windsor, Canada.

When Belle Isle, the city's greatest park, was purchased at a cost of $200,000 in 1879, there was agitation to put the aldermen in jail. Today its value to the city is upwards of $39,000,000.

The longest street in the world begins in Detroit. It is Michigan avenue and runs 272 miles, through a number of cities, without changing its name, and becomes Michigan boulevard in Chicago.

The automobile was not invented in Detroit, but the typewriter was. By Judge William Austin, in 1836. Austin also invented the solar compass. There are counties in Michigan where there is so much iron ore that an ordinary compass is useless. A magnetic compass almost never points to the north. It comes nearer to it in Michigan than in most states.

Thomas A. Edison got his early education in the Detroit Public Library. He printed a newspaper on a Grand Trunk train running between Detroit and Port Huron.

E. D. Stair, owner of The Free Press and a banker, was THE Stair of the theatrical firm of Stair & Havlin, which controlled the popular-priced legitimate theater circuit of the country about two decades ago. He is still in the show business as the owner of the Cass and the Lafayette theaters.

Sophie Lyons, the only woman ever to escape from Devil's Island and one of the few criminals to acquire wealth, passed her last years in Detroit, where she was a big real estate holder.

The house where U. S. Grant lived when he was a young Army lieutenant prior to the Civil War still stands in Detroit. Grant resigned from the Army before the shot fired at Sumter started the row and rejoined the Union Army from the civilian ranks.

During the Civil War Detroit was the last American stop on the famous underground railway for smuggling escaped Negro slaves to freedom in Canada.

Frank Couzens, the present Mayor of Detroit, is "following in father's footsteps." His father, Senator James Couzens, now rated as the richest member of the upper house of Congress, started in Detroit as a car checker and invested several hundred dollars with Henry Ford as one of the original financial backers of the automobile magnate, was Mayor of Detroit from 1919 to 1922, when he resigned to go to the Senate.

Detroit's population from 1910 to 1920 increased 578,285, a greater growth than had taken place during the previous 209 years of its existence.

Henry Ford never walks when he can run. He sprints about the factory, sprints to and from his car on all occasions. And he usually goes about without a hat.

The Yondetega Club in Detroit was described by Teddy Roosevelt as "harboring hard-boiled millionaires." No newspaperman has ever been permitted to step into the club. (Poof, poof.)

Henry Ford has always been a total abstainer and a prohibitionist. Yet you can get a drink in his hotel, the Dearborn Inn, and in his old taverns in Dearborn Village he has preserved bars and bottles.

During the war a policeman arrested a man on a Detroit street car as a dangerous character because he was reading a copy of a book by Geo. Bernard Shaw. (Haw!)

Detroit was the home and the producing center of Bert and Fred Whitney, producers of "The Chocolate Soldier" and many other hits of the late nineties.

"Just Because She Made Them Goo-Goo Eyes" and "Won't You Come Home, Bill Bailey," two of the earliest ragtime coon songs, were written by Hughie Cannon while he was piano player in a Detroit saloon. He was paid all of $30 for the first of the two songs.

Detroit is the birthplace of Gene Buck, Broadway celebrity, who was responsible for many of the "Follies" hits, and who now is the president of the ASCAP, and he broke into the song writing game drawing the designs for the title pages of the songs published by the Whitney-Warner Music Co.

Detroit produces 12,000,000 pins a day. (What! No pinheads?)

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, May 15.—Hello! The giggle of the day—a certain about-to-be-divorced hubby of a screen star is ACTUALLY thinking of suing her for nonsupport!

Bill Halligan (full name—William Kerry, if you're curious), Broadway wit-wheezer, slides a nifty under the door: When they were beautifying the Fox lot, one of the lads got an inter-office message for a suggestion on how to make the ground look like a park . . . And he wrote in "put some benches around the place and lay some bums on them!"

* * *

Difference of opinion makes horse races, so they say—and motion pictures. And it was for this very ancient reason that Robert Presnell, Warner associate producer, bowed out of the easy chair—but not always soft—and asked to be returned to the scenario writing department.

Bob recently signed a two-year agreement as producer, but Jack Warner, the headman, granted the "step-down" request.

Wanderings around Hollywood . . . as a baseball player, Al Jolsin is STILL a mammy singer. He broke his little finger trying to make a fancy catch—and now his golf is practically ruined! . . . The ex-hubby of a film star telephoned and said he was sending over a nice diamond pin. Some hours later, the cinema lassie opened an elaborately-wrapped parcel and found a "dime and an ordinary pin' (which if you're punny makes "dime and pin.") She TOPPED the gag by phoning him and saying: "Sorry, but I haven't a gown beautiful enough to wear with such a gorgeous gift!" . . . Well, well—this sorta makes everything EVEN . . . There's a deal on the fire for Paul Sloane to move his megaphone to M-G-M at the finish of his RKO flicker . . . Eddie Welch is dishing up a blackout for Moe Morton's "Shim Sham Revue," entitled "Paging Mr. Dillinger" . . . The ancient Joey Ray-Lew Brown FEUD is being constantly rivived by some goof who insists on sending Joey THREATENING letters and using Lew's name . . .

* * *

A director was introduced to the Sultan of Johore and thought he was being ribbed, so replied to the Sultans' invitation to visit his estate with: "I'll be glad to; but you must come and see me some time—I'm the King of Siam!" . . . Barbara "Snooney" Blair is back in town after flying to Chicago, New York and Florida in an especially chartered plane . . . Peter Milne, scenarist, got a new ticket at Warners . . . Vince Barnett, the insulter, goes comical for a role in "The Kansas City Princess" . . . "Death Parade" is a picture made up of actual war horrors. The boys of the American Legion, Post 43, got a glimpse and heartily endorsed it as being authentic.

* * *

Bill Halligan scribbles off another not to say, 'If you hear of a nice haunted house in Hollywood, I want to move in with two ghost writers!"

* * *

Odds and ends of the Boulevard—Dick Arlen is thinking of doing some personal appearances (to sorta pay for that European vacation), but he's SCARED! . . . If Al Jolson likes the script of "Go Into Your Dance," by Bradford Ropes (could that be his real name?) the mammy singer will oil up his knee joints for the lead . . . Tom Brown's BURNING UP at RKO. His contract with the outfit has only a few weeks to run, but the studio succeeded in loaning him to Fox, and Tom had planned on getting the job himself at an INCREASE in salary . . . Hugh Herbert's grabbed off a new contract from Warners'—and may work himself into stardom . . . A few minutes after Jack Warner played M. C. over the other night, all the cinemaland gag men sent him telegrams with offers to STAY OFF the air!...Siegfried Rumann, the classy Noo York actor who clicked in "Grand Hotel," is doing his second movie role in "Servants' Entrance," which introduces the new team of Lew Ayers and Janet Gaynor . . .

* * *

Newsy notes—James Dunn has signed a new contract with Fox. Charley Chase has been ticketed by Hal Roach for another series of a dozen fun films which the star will also direct.

* * *

Some six years ago—when she was but 15 years old—Julie Carter, then known on the screen as Gladys Belmont played the feminine lead in "Redskin," starring Richard Dix for Paramount.

In all the excitement of her first movie work, Julie didn't notice that the company accidently short-change routine. Kaufman that is she didn't check up until some weeks later, and then she was too bashful to complain.

The other night Julie was again introduced to B. P. Schulberg, then the boss of Paramount, and Al Kaufman, now an important executive. She told them of the short-change routine. Kaufman scribbled a note and said: "If we owe you the money, you'll receive a check in the mail tomorrow." The following day dust was brushed off ancient ledgers—and Julie got her week's salary of six years ago.

* * *

Snoopings . . . Every time Norman Foster or his wifey, Claudette Colbert, go on a trip some old MEANIE of a gossip starts separation rumors. And, as usual, these two are now in the throes of denying things. Norman's gone to Tahiti for a sunburn, or sumpin' . . . Tim McCoy, Columbia's horse opera star, has turned in his chaps and is checking out. No new deal is on the fire.

Jury Tinkering Halts Ohio Arson Trial

CLEVELAND, May 14.—(INS.)—Because of attempted jury tampering, the case of Henry Beckerman, Cleveland attorney, and Eli Robinson, Detroit night club operator, being tried here on arson charges as the outgrowth of a fire at a $1,000,000 factory building in 1931, today was declared a mistrial by Presiding Judge John P. Coming from the Palais Royale, Buffalo, the dancing De Voe Sisters made their Pittsburgh debut in McDonald's Walrose Night Club, Walrose Conway road, near Ambridge, Mrs. Edward Edwards, of Ambridge, celebrated her birthday with a party of 50 at the club Saturday night.

Freda Pope threw a party Wednesday morning in honor of the newest Show Boat marriage, that of Ray Boykus, of the orchestra, to Daisy Roberts, of Cleveland. In the Show Boat floor show Davey Jeffries supplants Aleene Dennison as emcee.

Freda and the checkroom girls, Florine and Eve, are still jabbering about the gallantry of those Navy men whose guests they were on the government boat that docked near the Show Boat last week. Ah, those uniforms!

New York spotters are said to have caught the Show Boat floor show last week and have commented favorably upon Betty Nylander's performance.

This is the last week for the Betty and Georgie Claire, dancing team, at the Boat. Following their close Friday night, they will open an engagement the following evening at the Summit Hotel.

Fred Sanders claims that the patio he's erecting for his new casino at Cliff Mines, off the Steubenville pike, will offer guests the advantage of high elevation.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

In Which the Customer Does the Work

"DEAR Mr. Hellinger: Please sit down for a moment, I'd like to talk to you. Now wait. Don't look for a signature, because there isn't any. I'm not signing this letter, you see, because I want people to remember me as I was. I am a has-been. You don't know what that is just now, and I hope you never do. You can't cash a memory.

"I was a newspaperman, Mr. Hellinger. Back in the days when Munsey and R. H. Davis were something more than legends. Those were the days when reporters were writers, amiable drunkards and good company, Mr. Hellinger. I knew most all of them in those days. Good fellows they were, and bully. But now Park Row has moved uptown, or to Woodlawn Cemetery, I don't know which.

"You're one of the new faces, and I like you. Some of your stories are actually good. Do you remember the days when the editor of the Sunday World used to send a staff of copy boys around to the cafes searching for O. Henry? And when they found him, how he'd excuse himself from the bartender, and repair to a back room where he'd write a classic in a half hour equipped only with a pencil and some beer-stained paper.

"I don't suppose you do. That was before your time. But it seemed of no importance then. Now—well, there's a little touch of soft purple around memories like that.

"I don't think I was a really great newspaperman. I was good, yes. Good in the sense that a milk horse is better equipped to cart a wagon than a race horse. But I wasn't a great star, like those I mentioned. Very few people have ever referred to me, and said: 'Remember him? He was a great editor in his time.'

"I started off as an apprentice blacksmith. Shoeing horses was considered quite honorable work then. I lasted about two years before I was fired for saying that I thought Admiral Dewey had more luck than brains.

"That's why I always maintain that George Dewey unwittingly started me off in the newspaper business. With one week's salary, I came to New York big and dumb, and literally fell into a job running to a newspaper office with an eyewitness account of a stabbing, instead of calling a cop. I asked the editor for a job, and got it.

"I worked hard. Not because I was particularly ambitious, but because I liked newspaper work. In five years I was rewrite man on the lobster trick. That's when I learned to cultivate Irish whisky and cognac as friends. The nights were long, but those two fellows made them exceedingly pleasant.

"Then I went to the day side on the city desk, and the future First Lady of my home worked in an office across the street. We used to flirt from window to window, and after awhile we waited for each other downstairs and laughed at what the world didn't know.

"Around my heart, there is still a spot about the size of the Sahara Desert for her, Mr. Hellinger. For if ever there was a lady, a grand lady, mind you, she was it. We spent 24 years together in all, and we never completed our honeymoon.

"We had two fine boys who were sent to a private school as soon as they had learned the difference between pi and pie. When they were young, they were very proud of their father. They sat up almost all night when he was first made managing editor.

"I remember how proud the First Lady was when we first moved to Riverside Drive. And the maid seemed to hinder more than help, because Her Highness couldn't sit still while there was cleaning or cooking to be done.

"That was the peak. From there the chart shows a gradual decline. My two friends began to edge the First Lady out of the picture. Drinking and love are only temporary friends at best. I renounced liquor every day for 14 years, and it seems now as though it took its toll on the First Lady, and left few scars on me. She worried, I guess. And one day, when I came in my boys wouldn't talk to me, and the maid asked me to walk on tiptoe.

"After that, there was no more choice to make. I had to stick to my two friends. They were all I had left. The boys—well, they tried me, and both found me guilty on all counts. I never saw them again.

"The decline was faster now. I okayed the wrong story one night. A gambling raid. Some of the publisher's best friends were in it. So I packed a pencil and a bottle, and left. Other papers had made attractive offers before, so I didn't feel badly. I was well known, you see.

"But it turned out that everybody felt sorry, but no one had an editorship that fitted my peculiar talent. For awhile, I worked on a city desk, and when they transferred me to the lobster trick, I quit. Five years ago, I was a district man for two weeks in the summer time, but the office let me go because they said that too many stories were getting away from me.

"I couldn't afford Irish whisky and cognac through most of prohibition or the depression, so I cultivated a taste for gin. It's really not bad, after you get used to it. And two years ago I wrote my last newspaper story. It was for a small town paper, and it was rejected.

"Oh, I almost forgot. You like a 'punch' ending, don't you? Well, this one is more or less in the nature of a laugh. I got a job recently as publicity agent for a band. I hated to do it, but I needed money. So, with a lifetime of newspaper experience behind me, I shot the works and wrote what I think was a classic yarn.

"I took it to a newspaper, and saw the city editor in person. He was a young fellow; college type. He read but one page of my baby.

"'Nothing doing,' he said brusquely. 'You press agents are all alike. Why don't you learn to write in newspaper style?'" ...

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Incidental to their presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" next week, the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players are trying to arrange for a display of original Tom show pictures to be hung in the lobby of the Theresa L. Kaufmann Theater May 22 and 23. The Lambs Club, noted organization of players in New York, has been asked to loan pictures of stars who have appeared in the historic play. They include David Belasco as Uncle Tom, Mary Pickford as Little Eva, Lotta Crabtree as Topsy and Fay Templeton as Miss Ophelia. No Tom show has been seen here in quite a long time, though it is only a couple of years ago that it was announced in Equity, the actors' magazine, that no company was playing it at the time, the first lapse in more than 50 years since the play was introduced.

A note from Mannington, W. Va., contains the information that Mary Jo Matthews, young actress of that city, who made quite a favorable impression here a couple of seasons back in a featured role in the musical comedy, "The Band Wagon," will make her screen debut in "Twentieth Century," with John Barrymore and Carole Lombard in the principal parts. Mary Jo, who is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Matthews, of Mannington, and for three years she was voted the most beautiful girl on the West Virginia campus at Morgantown, was a member of the cast of "Let 'Em Eat Cake" in New York last season.

GUN DUEL STIRS TROLLEY PANIC

CHICAGO, May 15.—(AP.)—A robber was critically wounded and passengers on a West Madison street car thrown into panic when a policeman, off duty because of injuries while directing traffic, frustrated a pair of robbers to snatch $400 from a restaurant manager.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH WANT-ADS BRING RESULTS

GUARD WIDOW AT RITES FOR RIDE VICTIM

Patsy Arabia's widow, Anna, who "put the finger" on three suspects alleged to have taken her husband on his gangland death ride, attended her late racketeer mate's funeral in New Kensington today under the watchful eyes of a bodyguard of three county detectives.

Fearing that Mrs. Arabia might meet a squealer's fate at the hands of other members of the gang, Chief George W. Murren assigned County Detectives Samuel Whisner, Thomas Calig and John Carmichael to guard the widow.

Yesterday, in a "standup" in the county jail, Mrs. Arabia positively identified Joe Rosa and the two Sam brothers, Albert and William, as three of the five men with whom Arabia left his Arnold home on the fatal ride last Friday night.

SEEK TWO OTHERS

Two other men, named by Mrs. Arabia, are being sought by county detectives.

Rosa and the Sam brothers were arrested Saturday morning after an automobile owned by William Sam was found by a Braddock patrolman. On the back seat and on the running board the detectives detected what seemed to be bloodstains. A hole in the windshield had been made by a bullet, they said.

The body of the murder victim had not been found when Rosa was placed under arrest as detectives said he attempted to drive away in the machine. The Sams were arrested later. All three denied knowledge of the crime. Rosa told detectives the windshield hole was caused by a stone.

WINDSHIELD EVIDENCE

The examination of the windshield revealed that the hole had been made from the inside, the detectives said. It was removed from the automobile and will be produced as evidence at the Coroner's inquest.

Rosa was scheduled to go on trial yesterday for the bombing of the Ban Box cabaret, East Liberty night club. The trial was postponed indefinitely.

Death once before interfered with the Ban Box case. John Aliberti, 35, of East Liberty, also indicted in the bombing, was found slain near McKeesport last October.

After questioning by detectives, William Sam was said to have admitted that he had lent the car to Rosa on the night Arabia was killed, but denied he accompanied him.

According to detectives, Rosa said he took the car to Braddock to have the windshield, which he declared had been broken by a stone, repaired. Finding the garage locked, he left it there and drove to New Kensington in an automobile he borrowed from a friend in Braddock.

The man from whom Rosa said he borrowed the second car denied that he had lent his car to him or that he had seen him Saturday morning or any other time. The Sams live in New Kensington. Rosa said he lived in Funston street.

Linwood Eisenberg, of Slippery Rock State Teachers' College, has resigned to accept the psychology professorship at Shippensburg State Teachers' College. Dr. Eisenberg had been head of Slippery Rock 17 years. He leaves August 1.

Champion 'Chute Jumper Here for Her 267th Leap

Record Holder Still Gets Thrill Stepping Into Midair

Miss Almeda Babcock, who claims the woman's world record for parachute jumping, arrived in Pittsburgh today and prepared for her two hundred and sixty-seventh parachute leap.

She looked at the murky atmosphere, which was thick enough to cut in slices, and opined that she'd have to figure out some way of getting down out of the clouds if the same conditions prevail at the time of her scheduled leap at Bettis Field at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Does Miss Babcock still get a thrill when she steps out of a plane in midair? Yes, she does. Despite her many leaps, she said:

"Every one is just as thrilling as the first."

But excitement isn't the motive that keeps her in the business. She says it's the best way she knows of making a living.

Miss Babcock is stopping here on her way to give exhibitions at the international air meeting in Paris. Later she will go to Milan and then continue around the world.

INSULL MAPPING LEGAL BATTLE

CHICAGO, May 15.—(AP.)—An attack on international law will be made by Samuel Insull's legal forces in their effort to keep the aged former financier from going to trial.

Declining to enter a plea, Insull has challenged the jurisdiction of the federal courts with the assertion that his entry into the United States was illegal—that he was "shanghaied" out of Istanbul.

A hearing on this point scheduled for today, was postponed for a week by the government which has sent for additional evidence and witnesses from the State Department in Washington.

United States Attorney Dwight H. Green asserted last night there was nothing binding in any way in international law, and that Insull has precedent in matters of this nature against him.

Insull's next engagement with authorities is tomorrow when he will be arraigned with his brother, Martin, on two state indictments charging embezzlement.

STEEDLE VOTE FRAUD TRIAL TOMORROW

Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, McKees Rocks politician and state legislator, and 11 co-defendants are scheduled to go on trial tomorrow in Federal Court on an indictment charging them with conspiring to falsifying ballots cast for candidates for Congress and United States Senate at the November (1932) general election.

The trial was listed to open yesterday, but was postponed by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in order to give jury members an opportunity to vote at today's primary.

DISCHARGES JURY

The jury which heard the case of the five election officials of the Second District, Second Ward, was discharged late yesterday by Judge Robert M. Gibson after it reported that it had not reached a decision and would be unable to do so.

Judge Gibson, sitting for Judge Schoonmaker, said that since the jury said it would be unable to reach a verdict and that today is primary election he would discharge them. The government has not yet set a date for a new trial. Another jury is to be selected.

The five officials of the Second District, Second Ward election board are Thomas O'Malley, judge; John Barosky and Earl Longo, inspectors, and Floyd Kawka and Stanley Carlowski, clerks.

INCLUDES JUSTICES

On the same indictment with Dr. Steedle are Attorney B. Robert Averbach, counsel for the Republican county organization; Justice of the Peace James J. Westwood, McKees Rorks; Justice of the Peace Paul N. Franks, Scott Township; four Stowe Township police, Capt. Frank Miller, Chief Thomas Saunders and Patrolmen William Schwartz and August Weisser, Attorney John J. McGrath, Burton J. McKee, Robert S. S. Haus and Wallace Ray, clerk in the delinquent tax office.

The trial of State Senator James J. Coyne and 11 others is listed on the court calendar for May 23.

$329,000 THEFT LAID TO CLERK

NEW YORK, May 15.—(AP.)—A trusted employe of a Wall street brokerage firm for 22 years, Sampson Wallach, 39, was arrested last night on charges of grand larceny, after Police Capt. Patrick McVeigh charged that shortages totaling $329,000 had been found in his accounts.

As a lad of 17, Wallach went to work with Halle & Stieglitz, stock firm, and eight years ago he became cashier. Since then, Capt. McVeigh said, thefts have ranged from $3,000 to $100 a day.

Never once until a week ago was suspicion directed toward the quiet, dignified cashier who did his work with dispatch and care. Wallach now is in the Tombs, after having assisted his employers make an audit of his books.

McVeigh said the prisoner admitted losing the money in "unfortunate" real estate transactions. He said none of the stolen money went into stock speculation, racing or other forms of gambling or for liquor and night life. Wallach's one extravagance, he asserted, was his home—a mansion requiring the services of several servants.

Watch Highways For Kidnapers

Highways leading into Pittsburgh were being watched by police today for three men suspected of kidnaping Percy Lamar Armstrong, Jr., 10, of Clarksville, Tenn., April 11.

A report that the trio, riding in a sedan bearing Mississippi license plates, was en route to New York was broadcast over the police radio late yesterday.

Smart Way to Slenderize

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

At least not until the resources of a smart, slenderizing frock like this have been exhaused. You could easily take off 10 pounds and not get anything like the satisfactory results this skillfully cut gown gives. MAYVIEW FIRE ROUTS FOUR

Fire of undetermined origin was discovered in the women's mental building, City Home and Hospital at Mayview, last night. The blaze was coincident with efforts by Welfare Director Southard Hay to add 79 employes to the Mayview payroll.

Attendants escorted four inmates of the room on the first floor to safety. The loss was estimated at $50.

In his request for additional employes, Director Hay states he has taken into account state requirements for the care of mental patients, the report of the Mayor's special committee and a report from Dr. J. J. Buchanan, representing the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League.

Among the position which Director Hay would add are eight assistant resident physicians, 10 junior assistant resident physicians, 32 junior registered nurses, seven social workers, four assistant occupational workers, one assistant druggist and a number of clerical positions.

GAUL TO SPEAK TO ORGANISTS

A brief business session was to mark the second of a three-day meeting of 150 church organists from various sections of Pennsylvania, which opened yesterday. Later they were to hear Dr. Harvey Gaul lecture in Webster Hall, and Arthur B. Jennings, Jr., in an organ recital in the Sixth United Presbyterian Church.

A dinner in the Edgewood Club and a recital and choir service in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church tonight were to close the day's activities.

Yesterday the delegates attended recitals in the Calvary Episcopal Church, Sacred Heart Catholic Church and in Carnegie Music Hall.

Officers will be elected at a banquet in Webster Hall tomorrow night.

B'Nai B'rith to Name Delegates

Senator William D. King, of Utah, will speak. Attorney Frank R. S. Kaplan, first vice president, will be installed as president.

PROBE HANGING IN MILLVALE

The reported suicide of Frank Raucher, 50, of 806 Stanton avenue, Millvale, was being investigated by the Coroner's office today.

Raucher hanged himself on the second floor of his home after leaving a farewell note in a bottle which was found yesterday by the milkman, Theodore Wolf, Jr., of Millvale, according to County Detective John Duderstadt. It read:

"Goodbye, you'll find me dead. No milk."

Wolf turned the note over to Duderstadt and the latter, with Millvale police, found the body. Raucher's wife left him last week because of his excessive drinking, Duderstadt said.

Raucher until two months ago was employed as a helper on a brewery truck.

PARIS, May 15.—(Universal.)—There may be no news in the fact that the French polo-playing Robert Gautier and his American bride, the former Eleanor Close Hutton, daughter of Edward B. Close, of Paris, and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, of New York, have been divorced, but—

That neither of them intend to marry again, for the present at least, may surprise a good many people, including one of Eleanor's closest friends, Princess Mdivani, the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to the Woolworth millions.

In Paris, Lady Granard, the former Beatrice Mills, of New York, in a long light blue coat collared in navy blue fox and with a navy aigrette-trimmed hat; Countess de Jumilhac, the former Ethel Barbey, of New York, in black wild flower printed crepe.

* * *

The shades of old New York have been revived in everyone's mind by the fact that Ward McAllister's niece, Louise, gave a party here to celebrate what she described as the twelfth year of "my happy, delightful separation from my charming and distinguished husband," the famous portrait painter, Alphonse Jongers. Jongers prefers Montreal to his native Paris, while his wife prefers Paris to the city her uncle made famous by creating and naming its "four-hundred."

* * *

Princess Barbara and Alexis Mdivani are going to England for a three-weeks' visit, taking as guests Miss Jane Alcott, of New York, and Barbara's cousin, James Donahue.

After awarding the prix Mdivani cup following the polo at Bagatelle, the Mdivanis were hosts at a large cocktail party. Prince Alexis was a member of the French team.

Mr. Farmer

The famous cabaret singer, Lucienne Boyer, is going to New York for $2,000 a week to buck up the night life there. She has a lot of new "stuff" for Manhattan's night-lifers.

MICHAEL FARMER, Gloria Swanson's playboy, playboyed right into a boxing bout in an exclusive night club here, choosing as his opponent a well-known South American about-towner, Camilo Aldzo, who apparently was getting the better of the exchange when it was interrupted by the spectators. Many said that Farmer was just getting warmed up and would have won if the bout had been continued. What was it all about? Well—ask Mike—and put up your guard.

Prosecuting Attorney David Lesperance, of Los Angeles, after calling on the Chicago opera singer, Mary McCormick, here, found her "willing to return without a struggle" to testify in a suit against the princely Mdivani brothers—or so he says. The brothers are Serge and David.

MISS McCORMICK

At any rate, Lesperance has accepted Mary's word she will cross the ocean, and has not served papers. Mary will sail aboard the Ile de France tomorrow after a successful season at the Opera Comique, the word "successful" including the usual train of shattered hearts, it is said.

BEAVER COLONY WIPED OUT

The beaver colony in Little Sewickley Creek has disappeared and the dam is broken, it was learned today.

Indications point to the recent open season on beaver in the state as responsible for the fact that the beavers in the Little Sewickley are missing.

However, two promiment wild life conservationists, John M. Phillips, former president of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, and Thomas Liggett, are not certain that the beavers were killed.

After inspecting the deserted dam Phillips said he thought it likely that they had been destroyed. Their pelts, he said, bring about $12 each.

Liggett declared that the beavers may have deserted the Little Sewickley because of lack of food. Discussing the open season on the animals, Liggett said:

"It was the saddest mistake the game commission ever made."

Liggett said that between 6,000 and 7,000 beavers had been killed during the six-week season which ended April 10.

SPIRITUALISTS CLAIM GAIN

Interest in the philosophy of spiritualism is increasing, the Rev. J. W. Whitwell, president of the National Spiritualist Association, told the Pennsylvania State Spiritualist Association in convention here today.

The twenty-seventh annual convention opened with a banquet last night in the Hotel William Penn with the Rev. C. V. Morrow, Pittsburgh, presiding.

Mr. Whitwell and the Rev. George B. Cutter, Boston, Mass., noted lecturer on spiritualism, will speak tonight. Messages purported to be from beyond the grave will be communicated through mediums. All meetings are open to the public.

OFFICER, MAN HURT IN CRASH

A motorist repairing his auto and a traffic patrolman were injured last night when another auto struck the parked machine.

Andrew Mastriano, 29, of 1103 Webster avenue, was standing outside his auto in Bigelow boulevard near the Pennsylvania Railroad Station when it was hit from the rear by a car driven by Joseph Bobby, 28, of 4 Clarendon place, police said.

Mastriano and Officer Hiram McAbee, who was alighting from his motorcycle, were knocked down. Both were taken to West Penn Hospital, Mastriano with a possible skull fracture.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT'S PLEA FOR BILLION

Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress today asking for $1,322,000,000 for recovery purposes:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my budget message to the Congress of January 3, 1934, I said to you:

"It is evident to me, as I am sure it is evident to you, that powerful forces for recovery exist. It is by laying a foundation of confidence in the present and faith in the future that the upturn which we have so far seen will become cumulative. The cornerstone of this foundation is the good credit of the government.

"It is, therefore, not strange nor is it academic that this credit has a profound effect upon the confidence so necessary to permit the new recovery to develop into maturity.

"If we maintain the course I have outlined, we can confidently look forward to cumulative beneficial forces represented by increased volume of business, more general profit, greater employment, a diminution of relief expenditures, larger governmental receipts and repayments, and greater human happiness."

The budget which I submitted to the Congress proposed expenditures for the balance of this fiscal year and for the coming fiscal year which, in the light of expected revenues, called for a definite deficiency on June 30, 1935, but, at the same time, held out the hope that annual deficits would terminate during the following fiscal year.

1935 TO TOP ESTIMATES

It is true that actual expeditures since January have proceeded at a slower rate than estimated; nevertheless, it must be borne in mind that, even though the actual deficit for the year ending June 30, 1934, will be below my estimate, appropriations are still in force and the amounts actually to be expended during the following year will, therefore, be increased over and above my estimate for that fiscal year. In this connection it is relevant to point out that during the fiscal year 1935 it is estimated that there will be actually expended on public works $1,500,000,000 out of appropriations heretofore made.

In my budget message of January 3, 1934, it was pointed out that there could be no abrupt termination of emergency expenditures for recovery purposes, that the necessity for relief would continue, and that appropriations amounting to $3,166,000,000 in addition to the appropriations contained in the budget itself would be requested for the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1935.

The present Congress has already made appropriations out of which, for the two fiscal years in question, it is estimated there will be expended the following sums:

Relief, $950,000,000.
Crop loans, $40,000,000.
Farm mortgages, $40,000,000.
Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $500,000,000.
Veterans' benefits, $22,000,000.
Army Air Corps, $5,000,000.
Flood control, Mississippi River, etc., $29,000,000.
Independent offices' act, $228,000,000.
Miscellaneous supplemental estimates, $30,000,000.
Total, $1,844,000,000.

This leaves a balance of $1,322,000,000 to be appropriated.

SPECIFIC ITEMS

Out of this balance it is necessary first to take the specific items to be appropriated for:

Federal land banks—
Subscription to paid-in surplus, $75,000,000.
Reduction in interest payments, $7,950,000.
Emergency bank act and gold transfer, $3,000,000.
Internal revenue service, $10,000,000.
Salaries, office of the Secretary of the Treasury, $100,000.
Secret service, $45,000.
Total, $96,095,000.

This leaves $1,225,905,000 available for the following purposes:

Civilian Conservation Corps camps, public works and relief work, in addition to amounts already appropriated, and including aid to the dairy and beef cattle industries.

It is estimated that the minimum requirements for the Civilian Conservation Corps will be $285,000,000 and that the amount available, therefore, for public works and relief will be $940,905,000. A very simple checkup of these figures shows that they total $3,166,000,000, to which reference was made in my budget message of January 3, 1934.

BROAD POWER URGED

It was my thought in January, and is my thought now, that this sum should be appropriated to me under fairly broad powers because of the fact that no one could then, or can now, determine the exact needs under hard and fixed appropriation headings. In furtherance of this thought it seems appropriate to provide that any savings which can be effected out of certain appropriations made for emergency purposes shall be available for emergency relief purposes.

In my judgment an appropriation in excess of the above amount would make more difficult if not impossible an actual balance of the budget in the fiscal year 1936, unless greatly increased taxes are provided.

The present estimates should be sufficient as a whole to take care of the emergencies of relief and of orderly re-employment at least until the early part of the calendar year 1935. If at that time conditions have not improved as much as we today hope, the next Congress will be in session and will have full opportunity to act.

SECRET CUTTEN DEALS BARED

CHICAGO, May 15.—(AP.)—Purported trade secrets of the master minds of grain speculation were disclosed today as the federal government continued its inquiry into alleged secret wheat deals by which the Department of Agriculture charges Arthur W. Cutten, prominent trader, manipulated the market in 1930.

Secret No. 1 was the part numbers play in the opening of trading accounts with brokerage houses. Cutten, for instance, carried all his accounts as a number instead of under his name, one broker testified.

The broker, Richard F. Uhlmann, secretary of Uhlmann Grain Company, said Cutten opened an account with his firm on May 15, 1930.

Uhlmann said Cutten's biggest deals were made with great suddenness.

"Sometimes he would not call our office, but would call a broker in the wheat pit and say, 'sell a million bushels.' He did not want it known he was trading. Sometimes we would receive instructions from Cutten's secretary."

Radio Comedian Found Dead in Home

LONDON, May 15.—(AP.)—Norman Clapham, a popular radio comedian who appeared under the name of "John Henry," was found dead yesterday in his flat. Authorities said they believed he died of gas poisoning, self-inflicted.

He came here after retiring as president of the college. He had also held the chair of pedagory at Cornell University.

"The present estimates should be sufficient as a whole to take care of the emergencies of relief and or orderly re-employment at least until the early part of the calendar year 1935. If at that time conditions have not improved as much as we hope today, the next Congress will be in session and will have full opportunity to act."

Simultaneously strong intimations came from high government sources today that the administration expects the banks to do a greater share of carrying the load and putting out credit to carry the recovery drive along.

Today's appropriation request completes the $3,166,000,000 emergency ecovery fund proposed for the 1934-1935 fiscal years in the Roosevelt budget of January. The President trimmed down today's estimate to take care of within the $3,166,000,000 limit the extra appropriations voted by this Congress, including added allowances for veterans and government salaries.

"Can you prove that Old Gold is easier on the Throat?"

asks George Raft

See GEORGE RAFT in "THE TRUMPET BLOWS" his latest Paramount Picture

Dear Mr. Raft:—

On March 9, 1934, we invited a congress of the greatest taste experts in America to smoke and compare the four leading cigarettes, with the names concealed, and select the cigarette they considered "smoothest"; and therefore easier on the throat and nerves.

The invitation was accepted. Sixty-nine wine tasters, coffee tasters, tea tasters and cocoa experts took part.

In repeated tests by these taste authorities, Old Gold was chosen as the smoothest brand. If that evidence isn't enough to convince your friend . . . ask him to try Old Golds for a few days and let his own taste decide.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—Old Gold's smoothness isn't an accident, Mr. Raft: No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Even the administration insiders here never understood why Al Smith bowed himself so quietly out of the national political picture.

Flimsy excuses were offered at the time for cessation of his picturesque criticism of certain administration policies. The most widely advertised one was that he differed with his magazine publisher about the air mail matter. That is what Smith would have called baloney.

Those who have talked with him recently have a new idea about it.

They whisper that his attacks on the administration drew a strong personal reaction on him. He did not mind abuse from a section of the press and public. But when his closest friends, and even members of his own family, began to call him a sorehead, he thought it was time to withhold his fire.

MESSAGE

A pal called Smith's office on the telephone one morning after Smith had made a strongly critical attack on the administration money policy. Al's secretary answered the phone, informed the caller that Smith was in a conference and asked if there was any message.

She recognized the voice of the caller, who said:

"Yes, I do want to leave a message. Are you ready?"

With pencil poised, she replied:

"All ready."

"Well, tell him—sppllhhh!"

That is a sound which has never been accurately reduced to language, but Al no doubt recognized it as a Bronx cheer, or what is commonly called "the bird."

DEBT BALLOON

President Roosevelt had an idea for solving the war debt muddle a few days ago but Congress romped all over it in the cloakrooms and it now probably never will see the light of day.

The scheme called for new agreements. All interest, past and future, would be waived. The principal would be paid in full.

It was based on the logical fact that a debtor is lucky to get his principal back these days without expecting any interest.

A trial balloon was sent up for the White House idea by Speaker Rainey. He pointed to our successful settlement with Finland on that basis (Finland is the only debtor paid up to date.) Rainey offered the plan as a model for those, like Britain, in partial default.

The shooting started at once.

DEFLATION

Congressional riflemen figured that the scheme would lop $10,000,000,000 off the debt. They are not willing to give up a single cent. At heart, most of them really want to force the debtors into default. At any rate, they would rather force a default than give in.

After a few days the administration let it be known it was "highly unlikely" that the plan would be officially offered.

NOTES

With so many matters up in the air, no solid guess can be made about adjournment of Congress. Congressional leaders have been thinking about quitting June 9 . . . Soothsaying politicians here figure that Pinchot will defeat Reed in the Pennsylvania primary, but have their doubts about Pinchot's ability to defeat the Democrat, Joe Guffey, in the fall . . . The White House still insists it is taking no part in the primaries, but it went to the extent of having Pinchot as an overnight guest recently. The insiders say it was not because Mr. Roosevelt likes Pinchot more, but Reed less. The Democrat, Guffey, will probably sleep in the White House before the November election.

New Natural Mineral Concentrate from the Sea, Free from Drugs, Fills Out Ugly Hollows with Firm Flesh—Adds 5 Pounds in 12 DAYS OR NO COST

TO 8 POUNDS in 12 days! 5 to 12 pounds in a few short weeks. Think of it! Yet these results are not unusual. Hundreds of skinny, scrawny, rundown people are amazed at this astounding new natural way to win back health and weight.

Doctors know how vitally necessary are natural food minerals, often so woefully lacking in even the most carefully devised fresh vegetable diets. Unless your system gets the proper amount of these minerals, many of them needed in only the tiniest quantities, even the best food fails to nourish you, fails to build rich, red blood, firm flesh and sturdy muscles. This lack of mineralization results in the failure to digest starches and fats in the normal diet. It makes no difference whether your appetite is good or bad, your food is converted into poisonous wastes instead of firm flesh and tireless energy.

Provides Needed Vegetable Minerals

Scientists, however, have only recently discovered a marvelous source of practically every single mineral essential to body needs. It is called Kelp-a-Malt, a pleasant, easy-to-take vegetable concentrate made from a luxuriant sea plant from the Pacific Ocean. It provides iron, sodium, calcium, phosphorus, iodine and other essential minerals in easily assimilable form, and also provides the effect of Vitamins A, B, D, G and G.

Try Kelp-a-Malt for a single week. Watch your appetite improve, firm flesh appear in place of scrawny hollows. Feel the tireless vigor and vitality that Kelp-a-Malt provides through its easily assimilable iron and copper. Its calcium and phosphorus build strong teeth and bones. Its sulphur and phosphorus assure proper elimination. 6 tablets provide more iodine than 486 pounds of spinach—assures protection against goitre.

Limited Offer

Prove the worth of this amazing weight-builder today! Two weeks are required to effect a change in the mineralization of the body. At the end of that time you will gain at least 5 pounds, you will look better, feel better and have more endurance than ever before, or the trial is free.

Don't wait any longer. Regain alluring curves and youthful energy this easy, scientific way. 100 Jumbo size Kelp-a-Malt tablets—4 to 5 times the size of ordinary tablets—costs but little. Get them today at any Sun Drug Store.

Comparison of Minerals in Kelp-a-Malt and Vegetables

Globe Trotter

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

A marked copy was sent from the institution. It reported that through the efforts of all the Globe Trotters, 103 new volumes were added to the library last week.

But every day I go over to the jail I hear the same wail:

"When do we get those dictionaries?"

We still need dictionaries. The jail has 12 Bibles but no dictionary in the library.

* * *

The magicians will soon bring their convention to the city of Pittsburgh. You may have or will read stories about their meetings. I have been promised several entertaining periods over the air from them. Watch for announcements.

* * *

Mrs. George Glatz, Glen Willard, now has joined the Globe Trotter committee on battling robins. The one that hurtles itself against her dining room window raps at the pane in the manner that would shame a woodpecker.

Mrs. Glatz had two canaries at the window. She thought that they might have been the objects of the attack, so she moved them. However, the robin keeps bobbin' along. The canaries, on the other hand, are not quite so nervous in their new location, where they can't see "Kid Redbreast" do his shadow boxing.

* * *

Mrs. T. C. Davidson, Edgewood —I'm working on your matter now. Expect results in a day or two.

* * *

Should Capt. Williams participate in the international air meet as American representative, you'll very likely hear of his Paris flights through trans-Atlantic broadcasts.

* * *

Radio announcers from the major networks are signing papers which make them temporary members of the Navy. CBS has not yet announced the names of those who will take berts on the battleships en route here for the grand review May 31.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy whenever we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

MT. RUSHMORE ENTRIES SPUR EFFORTS

Students are joined with their adult participants in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition today in studious enthusiasm to complete their texts before the closing date of May 30.

From universities, colleges, public and parish high and grade schools throughout Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and Northern West Virginia come reports of the thousands of students planning to submit their 600-word inscription. It may be from one of these that the final inscription will be selected as the basis for America's epic.

They are striving, not alone for an award from the cash and scholarship prizes being offered by the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers in behalf of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission, but with the hope that it will be their proud honor to submit THE text that President Roosevelt and his national committee will select as the most appropriate.

SUBTITLES COUNTED

Judging from questions being received from school leaders, some students have overlooked the important basis upon which a text must be written. While each entry must be based upon the nine specific episodes of history outlined in the rules, it is not enough that only the story of the episode is told. Americas epic, as it will be carved on the South Dakota mountainside for generations through 1,600,000 years to read, must tell what effect these episodes had on the progress and growth of the American nation.

Also, students should remember that no text can exceed 600 words. That means, if you subtitle each episode on your text with either a date or the title of that episode, that subtitle muse be counted. In many texts, the entry exceeds 600 words because of these subtitles. It is not necessary they be used.

The episodes are not necessarily have to be the same length. It is a matter for the participant to decide if the purchase of Alaska can be told in fewer words from its standpoint of importance than the building of the Panama Canal.

RULES IMPORTANT

And do not strive to set down your text in flowery phrases. Plain, simple English is what the national judges will desire. But try to write it from the heart so that your inscription will bespeak feeling.

There is a handy folder free for all participants. It tells all the rules, lists the awards and offers complete information on Mount Rushmore. It can be had at the Sun-Telegraph's downtown office, Fifth avenue and Market street. Or, it will be mailed provided a request addressed to the Pittsburgh Rushmore Editor, care Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., is ACCOMPANIED BY A STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESEED ENVELOPE.

Be certain that you understand the student rules which are printed on this page as well as the need of certain entrants to use the printed entry form.

Mount Rushmore Text Rules for Students

1—All students in the public, private and Pittsburgh Diocese parish schools, day and evening, in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia, are to submit their texts to the principals of the respective schools. The principals of Pittsburgh public schools, Allegheny County public schools, and the Munhall, Duquesne and Wilkinsburg schools will submit all entries to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.

Principals in Pittsburgh, Diocese, Carnegie, Rankin, East Pittsburgh, Crafton, Dormont, Mt. Lebanon, Clairton, Tarentum, New Kensington, Braddock, North Braddock, Homestead, McKeesport, Bellevue, Stowe Township and Monongalia County, Morgantown, W. Va., schools will submit the best text of each school to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee.

2—All students in universities and colleges in the same area are to submit their text to the faculty member designated by the school's president.

3—In the event there is no committee in charge of the competition at the school or college of any entrant, such entrant may mail his text to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee, in care of the Sun-Telegraph. These entrants must certify the class in which they are competing and the school from which they are entering.

4—All entries must be received by the schools or colleges of the entrants not later than midnight, Memorial Day, May 30, 1934. The same date closes entries to students submitting direct to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee.

5—All school and college committees must complete the judging of entries in their respective schools and send the best entry from each school to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee not later than 12 o'clock noon, June 16, 1934.

6—Every entrant in this competition agrees, as a condition of his entry, to accept the judgment of any school or local or intermediate board of judges, as well as the national committee, as final and without recourse.

STUDENT SPECIAL ENTRY FORM

Students attending colleges and schools in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia without active participation arrangements should attach this blank to their text entries. Address entries before midnight, May 30, to:

Aviation Progress Described by Quiz

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(AP.)—The forward strides of American aviation from 1927 to 1933 were described by Frederick J. Neely, chief of the Commerce Department's aeronautics information, at the resumption of Senate air mail investigation hearings yesterday.

Republican members of the committee called Neely. The questioning largely concerned the part the air mail, under former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, played in aeronautical development.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

By J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Greetings, Junior Birdmen. Scores of boys and girls in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Eastern Ohio—all members of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing—are busy today rounding up their membership of 20 junior aviation enthusiasts so that they can build their own flight squadron.

Spirit is flying high among the Junior Birdmen members of the Sun-Telegraph wing and every member is doing his and her best to keep active and enter into every activity that we sponsor. Probably that is the reason for the quick and large response to our flight squadron plan.

Read this letter, for example, from Carl Furry, of R. D. No. 2, Martinsburg, Pa.:

"I want to organize a squadron of Junior Birdmen and also a squadron of Junior Birdwomen. I am 22 years old and have been flying as a passenger for the last six years. This year I am a student pilot. What part can I take in this great organization of boys and girls?

"I have enough boys and girls waiting to join at once to form a flight squadron of each. Send me full details on how to sponsor flight squadrons."

Many thanks for your fine letter, Mr. Furry. I am sending you complete details about our organization and our flight squadrons at once.

Contest Winners to Meet Mrs. Roosevelt

On May 25 the four winners of the local Junior Birdmen motto contest, you know, will go to Washington, D. C., for three days. If you missed this first contest be sure you take part in our coming activities, which I will tell you about from time to time in this column.

John Cowan, Washington correspondent for the Sun-Telegraph, who has been arranging the sightseeing tour at the capital, just wired me this dandy bit of news:

"When Speaker Henry T. Rainey of the House of Representatives today was told of the visit of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Birdmen, he said, 'It will be a great pleasure for me to give these bright boys and girls a souvenir ticket to the House gallery and I am going to ask them to sit in the speaker row and witness the House in session. I expect to greet them personally when they arrive at the capitol and tell them something of the work of the Congress.'

"Mrs. Rainey, who serves as the Speaker's secretary, said, 'I am delighted to know that you have an avitrix in the party. I shall be here to greet her and will take this young woman personally under my wing.'"

Mr. Cowan also wired:

"I shall make every effort to have Mrs. Roosevelt welcome the birdmen at the White House. This, of course, depends upon her appointments. I am sure that if she has no other pressing engagements she will be there to greet you and your boys and girls. She likes young people and if there is a chance in the world of meeting the motto contest winners, you may bet that she will be on hand."

While in Washington the four winners, Dorothy Smith, George Bish, Don Gross and John William Scott will stay at the Lee House. Special arrangements have been made to give the boys and girls making the trip every comfort.

Answers To Questions

Herewith are the answers to questions which members have sent me. Many members have asked the same questions, so I will answer them without using nay names.

Until you obtain 19 members in addition to yourself I cannot enroll your group as a Flight Squadron.

When you organize your Flight Squadron, a book of rules and regulations will be sent you, giving the duties of officers and the means of electing them to office.

When you become 16 years of age it is necessary for you to be transferred from Group B membership to Group A. Upon notifying this office of your change in age, inclose your silver membership card and we will forward you a gold Group A card bearing the same membership number. If you should want a gold Group A membership wing you will have to enclose a 10-cent piece to cover the cost.

I regret to learn that you have already lost your wings. You can secure another pair by forwarding 10 cents to this office.

Keep sending your questions in, but remember that none will be answered by return mail. Also be sure to read the question and answer section whenever it appears. You may find the answer to your problems.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

JUNIOR PATROL

The people are voting to select the men who will be the candidates of the political parties in another big election in the fall.

Urge people to vote, fellows. Every citizen should vote if he possibly can. It is his duty as a citizen to try to elect the officers for the government he thinks are the best.

Today we have a letter from Jean Lang and other members of an Irwin Patrol. Jean is president and she wants a book telling her how to manage the patrol. You don't really need a book, Jean. Just go ahead and obey the pledge rules and do your best to help others. That's all we ask.

"We wish to tell you something about our plans for our summer vacation. In another month school will be out, and we must find other club quarters in which to hold our meeting. We decided to meet once a week at Capt. Bob's place on the hill.

"We are going to serve refreshments and engage in sports and other forms of amusements.

"We are having a big party later this month. Already we have earned $1.40 by selling lemonade to the children during the lunch hour. The lemons and sugar were donated by the officers of the club. Next Wednesday we are going to have a cake and hot dog sale.

"Again we wish to thank you for our radio broadcast and for putting our band pictures in the paper.

"However, we were disappointed that our teacher, Miss Beckwith, did not get any mention for her hard work and time in preparing us for the program. We hope you will give us another opportunity in the near future to put on a bigger and better program."

After reading a letter like that, we just have to be proud of our Oakdale Junior Patrol Club. Plans like that are almost ideal. We are sure that the club is going to keep on growing and that it will be more fun and more service all the time.

Such a spirit and the willingness to do things, is what makes a patrol club the most fun. We're sorry we didn't mention Miss Beckwith's name before, but we have now, and we want her to know how much we appreciated the program. You bet we will try to arrange for another broadcast.

M'NAIR SAFETY DIRECTOR AS COUNCIL STUDIES BELL

POLITICS

Watchers' Certificates Cause of Stir

By MARK SHIELDS

This, as many of you may know, is election day, when the free people step out to nominate candidates for office who will fight it out at the general election in November. It is an election day seen through a fog of claims, a fog of charges—and a fog of candidates.

Mr. Shields

There is quite a stir about watchers' certificates, not the volunteer documents but the ones which entitle the alert watcher—usually the possessor of a large family and a consequently important vote—to five good solid dollars. Times aren't so good in politics, and five dollars is real money to political workers who once expected and exacted ten.

Some of the very practical workers in the ranks of the "Reed Volunteers," backing Senator David A. Reed for the Republican senatorial nomination, assert they are being discriminated against because they do not also pledge themselves to vote for Attorney General William A. Schnader for the gubernatorial nomination.

Certificate dealers for Senator Reed and Mr. Schnader say there is nothing in this at all. You can take your choice. There never has been much of an admirable character about this business of paid watchers, and it must be admitted that the "volunteers" who complain indicate they may be patriots for profit rather than zeal. This, of course, has nothing to do with the Junior League branch of the volunteers, who wouldn't know a watcher's certificate if they saw one.

This business of watchers' certificates and orders and coercion always forms the finale of a campaign. Each candidate with a payroll, public or private, is charged with coercion, assessment or similar skulduggery, and most practice whatever form comes to hand.

Schnader Quarters Won't Open Tonight

There is a report that some employes of the State Liquor Control Board are being advised that it would be an excellent thing to vote today for Schnader and Governor Gifford Pinchot, the latter a candidate against Senator Reed. This is the one state agency which through civil service was supposed to be thoroughly out of politics, but which isn't.

As an example of what a remarkable campaign this is, there is the information that the Schnader headquarters in Allegheny County won't even be open tonight to collect returns, though the Schnader backers assert he is the leading candidate for the state. Nothing like that ever happened before for a first-rank candidate.

All manner of gentlemen are claiming all manner of support. For example, Harry A. Eigenrauch, Jr., an enthusiastic young Democrat, says that he has been indorsed by Chief of Police Ben Marshall for the Senate in the Forty-fourth District, and that the same indorsement has been extended to Frank Policastro in the Thirty-third District for Congress.

Mr. Marshall was so busy girating about yesterday afternoon trying to discover who was his boss as head of the shifting Safety Department that he could not be secured for confirmation, but young Mr. Eigenrauch has a reputation for truthfulness. The indorsements were made, he said, because Mr. McNair was for them, also.

Perhaps Mr. Marshall found out who was the real boss of the Safety Department after all. Some interest attached to the enthusiasm of Mr. Eigenrauch over the indorsement. Certainly the approval of a mere individual would have caused no such delight. Can it be that Mr. Marshall is the head of the Police Department, even though that department is not supposed to be in politics, which was the basis for the encouragement?

Mayor's Office Dizzy Place

The Mayor's office was a dizzy place yesterday afternoon, above and beyond the skirmish over the Safety Department and the perennial Traction Conference Board. Some young men milling about claimed that orders of a morning with respect to whom they should be for today were changed before evening. But, of course, there was no politics.

Percy R. Williams, head of the tax board, who used to be the Mayor's secretary until he was edged out in favor of Theodore Moritz, now one of the Mayor's congressional candidates, indorsed Mr. McNair as a candidate for Governor. He said:

"I am voting for William N. McNair because I believe him to be the most progressive candidate for Governor before the people at this time."

And to emphasize that he was progressive, that Mr. Williams' confidence was not misplaced, Mr. McNair stepped out and nominated for the traction board a newspaperman, one of a long line of nominees who have been turned down by City Council.

Incidentally, it appears that A. Marshall Bell, nominated by the Mayor yesterday as safety director, is not registered for this election from his North Side home. That is probably basis for saying there is nothing political about the appointment, though it is well recognized that it is a direct shot at Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence.

ROSA PONSELLE, DAMROSCH AT ODDS

Can't Agree on Thing Except Value of Our Music Drive

Rosa Ponselle and Dr. Walter Damrosch can't "get along."

They "disagreed" on practically everything today from cream on baked apples to crooners and marriage.

But the famous prima donna and noted conductor did agree that all Pittsburgh should get behind the Symphony Society's campaign for $100,000, which will be formally opened tonight by a dinner at Hotel Schenley. Both will be guests of honor, Dr. Damrosch the principal speaker.

'NO, NO, DOCTOR'

Breakfasting together this morning at the Schenley, Dr. Damrosch politely tried to pour cream over Miss Ponselle's baked apple. She exclaimed:

"No, no, doctor! I weigh 160 now and that's enough. You're one of those who knew me when."

She referred to the days that she tipped the scales at well over 180 pounds. She added:

"Of course, a singer needs some girth."

"Rudy Vallee is good, one of the best. And King Crosby—or is it Bing?—he's good, too."

Dr. Damrosch, happily married for lo! these many years, believes music and matrimony make a good mixture. Miss Ponselle, happily single, believes each is a career in itself and should be kept separate. Her plan:

"When I retire maybe I'll think of love. I'll probably be so old then, though, nobody will want me."

MUSIC DRIVE PRAISED

Success of the Symphony Society's drive for $100,000 is far more important to Pittsburgh than the results of today's election could possibly be, Dr. Damrosch believes. He said:

"The cultural benefits of music are lasting and become a heritage. Politicians usually sing their own swan song, any way, and the discord of politics, as compared with the harmony of music, becomes a headache."

Dr. Damrosch likes Pittsburgh. His visit today recalled his visits here with his orchestra and his early day friendship with the late Andrew Carnegie.

Miss Ponselle is here primarily to appear as soloist with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra at its final concert of the season tomorrow night at Syria Mosque. She will attend tonight's dinner, but will not speak. The famed soprano, whose poise before thousands of persons gathered in an opera or concert audience, is perfect, confided:

"If they asked me to speak tonight I'd crawl under the table and hide. I'd die through fear."

KANE SCORES ADVISORS IN SMITH FIRING

Democrat Hints 'Fix,' Terms Dismissal 'Window-Dressing'

Mayor McNair today heads the Safety Department as its temporary director while Council ponders the nomination of A. Marshall Bell.

In the meantime, Councilman John J. Kane has taken steps to push his investigation of the police bureau with a police commission of five. He has called a meeting to organize the commission for tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The delay on confirming Bell was granted by Council at the request of Kane, who asked for more time to learn of the candidate's qualifications.

RECESS UNTIL THURSDAY

Council has recessed until Thursday at 2 p. m., when a vote will be taken on Bell's name.

Safety Director Smith cleaned out his desk and left his office at City Hall last night, but not before Mayor McNair had talked with him and had made a futile effort to get back from Council the Smith dismissal.

Asked if he would take over leadership of the Safety Department, the Mayor, after a visit to the safety director's office, said:

"I guess I'll have to."

RAPS ADVISORS

Kane's successful effort to obtain a delay on the consideration of Smith's successor was plainly distaste ... to the Mayor. It was even less popular to the group whom Kane in a ringing speech before Council referred to as the "silk stocking advisors."

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston, who, with Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, has worked hard for the Bell appointment, stood at the door between the Mayor's office and Council chamber during that portion of the Kane oratory.

On three motions dealing with the Smith-Bell incident, the five Republicans voted against the four Democrats in Council yesterday.

So monotonous did this performance become that one youth got himself thrown out of Council hall by Officer Mose Jacobs for anticipating the vote of Republican William J. Soost.

BLOCK INDEFINITE DELAY

The Republicans first voted to accept the Smith dismissal, then blocked an attempt to table the Bell appointment, and finally stopped an effort to delay it indefinitely. The temporary recess was granted Kane on a motion by P. J. McArdle, Republican.

Kane in vigorous speeches fought the dismissal of Director Smith and the proposed appointment of Bell. He termed the Mayor's dismissal of Smith as "window-dressing" and declared that it will not stop the investigation of the police bureau.

Although not mentioning him by name, he continually directed his fire against Supt. of Police Ben R. Marshall. Once he was on the verge of announcing some information regarding police and the rackets. He said:

"I have information that an important political figure in this city approached Director Smith recently and told him that the police bureau had been 'fixed' if he would give the word for the rackets to open up. Smith immediately told the Mayor about this and the Mayor laughed."

NOMINATES NEWSPAPERMAN

Kane later refused to identify the politician who talked to Smith.

The Republicans again made use of their five votes to reject a communication from the Mayor naming George E. Evans to the $12,000 chairmanship of the Traction Conference Board.

Undaunted, the Mayor selected a newspaperman, Kermit McFarland, for the next ride on the Traction Board merry-go-round. The name has been sent to Council.

Should McFarland fail of confirmation, the Mayor revealed, the next candidate will be the one he says was recently suggested to him by Senator James J. Coyne.

The Mayor said this was George S. Oliver. At any rate, the Mayor said he would send in Oliver's name in case McFarland is not acceptable.

And if both are turned down His Honor, needless to say, has still another name—John S. Herron, his predecessor.

PITT DEDICATES 'OWL' TO MELLON

The University of Pittsburgh's 1934 issue of The Owl, senior year book, has been dedicated to Andrew W. Mellon—a member of the class of 1873.

Of the former Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to the Court of St. James, the book, issued today, states in part:

"Great industries are here because of you. Better schools, churches, hospitals and scientific research are here because of you. The nation as well as Pittsburgh owes you much thankfulness."

With the appearance of The Owl 20 Pitt seniors took their places in the "Hall of Fame." They include:

PONDER DIVORCE FOR CARNAHAN

Whether W. D. Carnahan, prominent Boston (Pa.) churchman, should be granted a divorce from Mrs. Isabelle Carnahan after 30 years of married life was under consideration today by Judge Frank P. Patterson.

The spirited divorce contest between the churchman and his "jealous" wife ended yesterday following the testimony of Mrs. Willa Conrad, 20, daughter of the estranged couple, who appeared as a witness for both her mother and father.

Carnahan sought the divorce on grounds that his wife was "too jealous," accusing him of paying attention to church women and school teachers.

The daughter, describing her parents' home life for the judge, said:

"I would say my mother and father lived as happily as the ordinary married couple, having the usual family spats."

Mrs. Conrad, who said she ran away from home and was married at the age of 17 rather than go to college, praised both her parents. She said:

Why Not Make Wall Street a Summer Hotel?

By ARTHUR (Bugs) BAER

Wall Street now guarantees you a fair shake and a long roll.

Selling stocks will be as honest as fresh country butter.

The little fellows will be protected like an eagle's eggs until they are ready to fly.

There will be no more pools, syndicates, wash sales, boiler rooms, rumors or corners. That sounds as beautiful as gypsy music.

Too good to be true. Why not put in hammocks and swings and make the whole thing a summer hotel?

Unemployed to Hear Economic Rent Talk

Mayor McNair will speak at the Mary J. Cowley School, Sherman avenue, tomorrow night. His subject will be "Economic Rent." His speech is sponsored by the Independent Unemployed Citizens' League of the Twenty-second Ward.

M'NAIR FIRES ASSESSOR

A verbal brawl between Mayor McNair and City Assessor James P. Bailey disrupted the quiet of the Mayor's office in City Hall today.

It seemed to disprove the contention that payrollers were not getting "suggestions" as to how to vote.

It wound up with the Mayor discharging Bailey after the latter refused to resign. McNair's secretary, Theodore L. Moritz, was a party to the word battle in which Bailey threatened to "wipe up the floor" with Moritz.

Bailey was shouting that the Mayor and Moritz were trying to intimidate him. Moritz said all he asked was that Bailey work for the Mayor in the primary.

When the interchange reached the point where Bailey told Moritz to take off his glasses, McNair stopped it and dictated Bailey's discharge to an assistant secretary.

The Mayor said Bailey had demanded that Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston give a woman a job and became noisy about it.

Bailey said he would have a statement to make later.

PROBE M'NAIR RUM RULING

A report from investigators probing Mayor McNair's refusal to hear evidence against prisoners charged in Morals Court with violations of state liquor laws Sunday will be ready tomorrow.

The report is expected to tell W. H. Beachy, state revenue agent here, whether Mayor McNair had a valid reason for dismissing prisoners whom he supposedly was bound by law to hold for court.

If the investigators report the cases merit court action, Beachy will be assisted in prosecuting them by District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Park announced yesterday.

Five persons were brought before McNair, sitting as magistrate for a Sunday thrill; they had been arrested for violating the state liquor code.

Thieves Loot Rooms Of Passavant Nurses

The theft of four rings and a watch from the Passavant Hospital Nurses' Home, Reed and Miller streets, was being investigated by city detectives today. Several rooms in the home were ransacked late yesterday, the detectives were informed.

TAX PAMPHLET IN NOTICES

A tax pamphlet, showing the financial condition and departmental set up of Allegheny County, will go to 80,000 taxpayers in the same envelope with tax notices, County Commissioner C. C. McGovern announced today. The first tax bills will be sent out tomorrow.

McGovern, who wrote a bit of explanation in the financial pamphlet which was deemed "political" by Controller Robert G. Woodside and his attorney, Arch Powell, planned to send out 350,000, but the Controller refused to authorize advertisements for bids, saying only the Controller could do this. The Commissioners can buy without his authority up to $300, which is being done.

But McGovern added:

"We're going to send out the other 270,000 if I have to solicit the money on the street corners. The taxpayers have a right to know the facts."

PITT TO LAUNCH FUND DRIVE

Inaugurating the Cathedral of Learning campaign for $1,650,000 to complete the edifice, 500 volunteer workers will meet in the Cathedral's Commons Room Thursday night.

Speakers will include Chancellor John G. Bowman and Homer Williams, general chairman of the drive. Thomas Fitzgerald, chairman of the citizens' committee, will preside.

Preliminary meetings scheduled include a dinner meeting of vice chairmen and group leaders of the citizens' committee on the thirty-sixth floor of the cathedral tonight, and a tea for women workers tomorrow. A radio address by Fitzgerald over WCAE has been scheduled Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

In connection with the drive, Open House Week will be observed beginning Sunday.

McGovern Jibes Women In Park Antique Feud

The members of the Federation of Women's Clubs who collected antiques of Colonial days and placed them in the historic stone manse in South Park can take them out, if they wish to, Col. C. C. McGovern opined today.

The chairman of the County Commissioners said:

"Let 'em take them out. I can have it filled up in a week. I thought they took over the stone manse for an exhibit, and not a permanent thing. And my idea is that anything on county property should be run by the county and not any outside organization.

"But even at that, if they'd come before the commissioners and asked what they wanted, and not abused them in the public press, I'm sure we'd have given them what they wanted."

The women, Mrs. Robert Cochrane, Mrs. John M. Phillips and others, asserted Sunday that the commissioners had withdrawn during the winter, a caretaker, leaving the valuable antiques without care.

To this McGovern answered:

"The manse was locked up, but we hired a woman for them, gave her a house, and even a park policeman drove her from house to manse. She was reappointed last week. But let them take the things out. Maybe we'll have a manse no more. We never missed it when we didn't have it."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 15.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph.

"The government is arranging a war chest of three million to hire and equip more men in the crime drive. 200 speedy armoured cars, sub machine guns, bullet proof vests and tear gas." 200 armoured cars cant very secretly drive up to your place of hiding without being detected in advance. In days when they caught these fellows, it was by one Pinkerton detective following them, or one Texas Ranger, or one North mounted police. I bet we got a lot of good man hunters in our various forces, if they were allowed to work without carrying an orchestra with em.

Phone to Mrs. Pinchot? Oh, McNair Will Pay

His Honor the Mayor announced today that he personally would pay for those telephone calls he made to Mrs. Pinchot and the White House.

This revelation was made after Controller James P. Kerr had threatened to demand an explanation from McNair as to why the city should pay for any crossfire between the Mayor and the Governor's wife. The Controller probably would have included the Washington call if the bill had arrived.

The Mayor called Harrisburg from North Side Police Station and had a few drunks tell Mrs. Pinchot of the devastating effects of what His Honor calls "Pinchot whisky." Mrs. Pinchot said later the drunks seemed more coherent than the Mayor, who never touches a drop.

His Honor called President Roosevelt (but got only a secretary) to find out whether he should vote for Pinchot or Guffey today.

REED MAN RAPS PINCHOT ON RELIEF

The citizens are paying dearly for having Pennsylvania and its affairs used as a pawn for the political advancement of the Pinchots, Raymond D. Evans, chairman of the committee supporting Senator David A. Reed for renomination, has declared.

Pennsylvania has received only $13,858,161 out of $778,591,898 allotted from public works funds for nonfederal projects, Evans said. He continued:

"Where, I asked the Governor, is his much publicized 'drag' with Washington and the White House when he permits his state to pay one-tenth of the taxes and get less than one forty-eighth of the benefits?"

Calling Senator Reed a "war buddie of mine," Father James R. Cox spoke for his candidacy last night, praising his stand for veterans. His opponent—Pinchot—he said had promised everything and forogt his promises immediately after election. Zeno Fritz also spoke for Reed.

Elizabeth Arbuthnot, vice chairman of the Reed Volunteers, has issued this statement in support of the renomination of Senator Reed:

"Senator Reed is a native Pittsburgher—educated in Pittsburgh. Pittsburghers complain that this community does not patronize its own industries. Why not apply the same principle to our people and insist that Pittsburgh stand behind Pittsburghers — particularly when they are voting for a native son who has brought fame to his city as a statesman and a soldier! In other words, Pittsburgh should be for Pittsburghers."

TAYLOR SCORES 'MILLIONAIRES'

Voters can save much expense and hot air by nominating Robert G. Taylor for United States Senate in both primaries, Taylor stated today.

Of his campaign he said:

"I sought out neither the wealthy nor the politicians. I looked for the kind of people who are seeking the truth. Ninety per cent of the American people want to do what is right and are honest at heart and soul. I can represent them better than my four millionaire adversaries."

Tax Head Denies Candidate Indorsed

LANCASTER, May 15.—(AP.)—H. L. Shenk, president of the Tax Justice League of Pennsylvania, said last night the league has indorsed no candidates for public office in the primary election.

Shenk said he had heard reports stating that the organization favors a particular candidate for Governor.

Candidates Set To Back Vote Law

Headquarters of all major candidates have announced they will maintain legal staffs today to combat election cheating. Complaints over illegal assistance at the polls and any infraction of election laws are invited by the party committees.

Eynon's Manager Predicts Victory

READING, May 15.—(AP.)—John R. Bingamana, state chairman of Benjamin G. Eynon's campaign for the Republican nomination for Governor, last night predicted Eynon "will be the victor by at least 25,000 votes."

Pinchot Leader Predicts Victory Here by 75,000

Allegheny County, the home of Senator David A. Reed, will repudiate him and his policies by at least 75,000 today, according to Horace Thomas, Jr., chairman of the Pinchot for Senate Committee.

The last-minute effort of Reed supporters to ward off sure defeat by expenditure of large sums of money in an effort to buy the election has proved utterly worthless, Thomas charged.

He said:

"I charged that the Mellon corporation interests behind Senator Reed were coercing employes and were spending money like water. In spite of the formal denial issued by their headquarters, every act and statement of theirs since that time proves that charge."

The people of Allegheny County will not be fooled again, Thomas said. He stated they would overwhelmingly approve the record of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who, he said, had for more than 25 years led the fight for social legislation.

Restaurant Patron Injured by Fall

Falling down 14 stairs at a restaurant early today, Edward Darganze, 23, of 1128 Troy Hill road, was in West Penn Hospital with head injuries. Detectives investigated and learned the fall was accidental.

Slovak Society Favors Einstein

Members of St. Michael's Society, Branch No. 2 K. J., and No. 42 M. O., of the First Catholic Slovak Union of the United States, have indorsed State Senator Morris Einstein for re-eletcion in the Forty-second District.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

This is the seventh of a series of Safety Cartoons drawn by a CWA artist for the Better Traffic Committee as an educational aid in reducing the growing number of traffic accidents in Pittsburgh. The artist, Frank McFeatters, was one of 100 CWA workers assigned to the Traffic Committee and his art ability was an accidental discovery.

The center line is a danger line.

Crossing or straddling it is one of the major law violations contributing to traffic accidents in Pittsburgh.

Crossing invites disaster, indicates a lack of regard for the violators own life as well as disregard for the rights and safety of others.

PHILLIPS ENDS DRIVE, WOULD CUT TAXES

With a final promise of drastic reductions in governmental expenditures to reduce taxes, Thomas W. Phillips has closed his campaign for Republican nomination for Governor.

Phillips last night declared that in the last 15 years there had been an increase of nearly 400 per cent in the number of state employes. He said:

"These increases will continue so long as you return to office those who have been responsible for them. As a businessman I feel freer to approach these problems than a politician or a man who has been part of an outgoing administration that has failed to accomplish any real reduction in the cost of state government

Reports from all parts of the state that voters were aroused to the need of new party leadership gave him confidence of victory, Phillips said.

SHANNON STAYS IN G. O. P. RACE

LANCASTER, May 15.—(AP.)—Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon told a Lancaster County audience last night that pressure had been brought to bear to have him leave the race for the Republican nomination for Governor, but that he had decided to finish what he started.

Shannon, commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, said he is confident that he will "go over the top" tomorrow and "report victory" after the polls close.

Victorious or defeated, he said, he intends to seek no further honors in the state. He asserted, however, he "would be able to do a thorough job of house-cleaning at Harrisburg." He said:

"Many practical politicians failed to see the handwriting on the wall and the revolution of the ballot in the last presidential election in which Democrats showed strong gains in Pennsylvania."

Shift Tax Burden, Cunningham Plea

The burden of taxation must be shifted from real estate to other forms of wealth, according to Sam K. Cunningham, candidate for Congress in the Thirty-second District.

Cunningham believes that a larger proportion of the expense of government should be born by bonds or stocks. Reduction in taxes in the next few years he considers impossible.

VICTORY SEEN BY MARGIOTTI, FOES DEFIED

Predicting victory for himself, Charles J. Margiotti, seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, calls the professional politicians of Pennsylvania prophets of despair.

In an address last night, Margiotti said:

"The times demand a change, and I promise you a change. I will place the greatest burdens of our economic life upon those most able to carry them and not upon the poor, or oppressed, and those least able to protect themselves.

"Not all the threats of the old gang, not all the votes they can buy, not all the cheating they can do in the county, not all the lies the professional politicians use to deceive you, can prevent my nomination."

Political Noise Annoys, Civic Club Asks Ban

Blaring loud speakers of the political campaign have gotten on the nerves of the noise committee of the Civic Club of Allegheny County.

In a letter addressed to Council they have urged the passage of an ordinance to include all outdoor loudspeakers in the present ordinance covering broadcasting of music.

The letter suggests that the amendment will enable Police Supt. Ben Marshall "to eliminate this objectionable ballyhooing."

Legionnaires' Sons Receive New Officers

South Side Post No. 453, Sons of Legionnaires Squadron, will hold their first initiation and installation of officers at South High School tomorrow night. H. E. Loughry is director of the degree team.

One Dead, Score Hurt In Dock Strike Fight

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, May 15.—(INS.)—One striking longshoreman was killed, another was perhaps fatally wounded and a score were injured today when police, strikers and strikebreakers clashed on one of the docks in the first open gun fighting of the walkout of Pacific Coast harbor workers.

Engineer Denies Fault in Crash

W. J. Ley, an engineer, of 2730 Sacramento street, whose automobile figured in a collision at Liberty avenue and Twenty-ninth street with another driven by Traffic Patrolman Daniel J. Doyle last Saturday, denied today that he was to blame for the mishap.

Doyle was injured and taken to St. Francis Hospital. Charges against Ley are still pending. He said he would present witnesses to show that he was not at fault.

Former Policeman Freed on Parole

Having served two months of a six-months jail sentence, Joseph Thomas, alias Oppenheim, former police sergeant, was free today, under parole for the remainder of his term.

Judge W. Heber Dithrich granted the parole yesterday. Thomas pleaded guilty on March 15 on a charge of operating a numbers lottery.

Six new libels for divorce were on file in Common Pleas Court today and one new decree had been granted.

The libels were filed by Margaret Ford against James Ford, Bertha Fine against Samuel Fine, Josephine Moore against Harry Moore, Sara K. Jackson against Louis E. Jackson, Olivette M. Kirnan against Thomas M. Kirnan and by Ethel Johnston against William S. Johnston.

AMERICA'S BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP

THE THIN MAN -:- By Dashiell Hammett

Police Searching Nick's Apartment Find Gun Dorothy Gave Him

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

(Soon to appear on the screen at Loew's Penn Theater as a thrilling motion picture made by Cosmopolitan Production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.)

Men came in and dragged us apart.

It took us five minutes to bring Nora to.

She sat up holding her cheek and looked around the room until she saw Morelli, nippers on one wrist, standing between two detectives. Morelli's face was a mess; the coppers had worked him over a little just for the fun of it. Nora glared at me. "You damned fool," she said, "you didn't have to knock me cold. I knew you'd take him, but I wanted to see it.

One of the coppers laughed. "Wow," he said admiringly, "there's a woman with hair on her chest."

She smiled at him and stood up. When she looked at me she stopped smiling. "Nick, you're—"

I said I didn't think it was much and opened what was left of my pyjama-coat. Morelli's bullet had scooped out a gutter perhaps four inches long on my left side. A lot of blood was running out of it, but it was not very deep.

Morelli said: "Tough luck. A couple of inches over would make a lot of difference the right way."

Slaps Morell's Mouth

The copper who had admired Nora—he was a big sandy man of forty-eight or fifty in a gray suit that did not fit him very well—slapped Morelli's mouth.

Keyser, the Normandie's manager, said he would get a doctor and went to the telephone. Nora ran to the bathroom for towels.

I put a towel over the wound and lay down on the bed. "I'm all right. Don't let's fuss over it till the doctor comes. How'd you people happen to pop in?"

The copper who had slapped Morrelli said: "We happen to hear this is getting to be a kind of a meeting-place for Wynant's family and his lawyer and everybody, so we think we'll kind of keep an eye on it in case he happens to show up, and this morning when Mack here, who was the eye we were kind of keeping on it at the time, sees this bird duck in, he gives us a ring and we get hold of Mr. Keyser and come up, and pretty lucky for you."

"Yes, pretty lucky for me, or maybe I wouldn't've got shot."

He eyed me suspiciously. His eyes were pale gray and watery. "This bird a friend of yours?"

"I never saw him before."

"What'd he want of you?"

Nick Quizzed

"Wanted to tell me he didn't kill the Wolf girl."

"What's that to you?"

"Nothing."

"What'd he think it was to you?"

"Ask him. I don't know."

"I'm asking you."

"Keep on asking."

"I'll ask you another one: you're going to swear to the complaint on him shooting you?"

"That's another one I can't answer right now. Maybe it was an accident."

"Oke. There's plenty of time. I guess we got to ask you a lot more things than we'd figured on." He turned to one of his companions: there were four of them. "We'll frisk the joint."

"Not without a warrant," I told him.

"So you say. Come on, Andy." They began to search the place.

The doctor—a colorless wisp of a man with the snuffles—came in, clucked and sniffed over my side, got the bleeding stopped and a bandage on, and told me I would have nothing to worry about if I lay still for a couple of days. Nobody would tell the doctor anything. The police would not let him touch Morelli. He went away looking even more colorless and vague.

The big sandy man had returned from the living room holding one hand behind him. He waited until the doctor had gone, then asked: "Have you got a pistol permit?"

Finds Dorothy's Gun

"No."

"Then what are you doing with this?" He brought from behind him the gun I had taken from Dorothy Wynant.

There was nothing I could say.

"You've heard about the Sullivan Act?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Then you know where you stand. This gun yours?"

"No."

"Who's is it?"

"I'll have to try to remember."

Guild Introduces Self

The big sandy man watched Nora go out of the room. He shook his head solemnly. His voice was solemn: "By God, sir, you're a lucky man." He suddenly held out his hand. "My name's Guild, John Guild."

"You know mine." We shook hands.

Nora came back with a siphon, a bottle of Scotch, and some glasses on a tray. She tried to give Morelli a drink, but Guild stopped her. "It's mighty kind of you, Mrs. Charles, but it's against the law to give a prisoner drinks or drugs except on a doctor's say-so." He looked at me. "Ain't that right?"

I said it was. The rest of us drank.

Presently Guild set down his empty glass and stood up. "I got to take this gun along with me, but don't you worry about that. We got plenty of time to talk when you're feeling better." He took Nora's hand and made an awkward bow over it. "I hope you didn't mind what I said back there awhile ago, but I meant it in a—"

Police Depart

"He's sweet," she said when she came back from the door. "Hurt much?"

"No."

"It's pretty much my fault, isn't it?"

"Nonsense. How about another drink?"

She poured me one. "I wouldn't take too many of these today."

"I won't," I promised. "I could do with some kippers for breakfast. And, now our troubles seem to be over for a while, you might have them send up our absentee watchdog. And tell the operator not to give us any calls; there'll probably be reporters."

"What are you going to tell the police about Dorothy's pistol? You'll have to tell them something, won't you?"

"I don't know yet."

"Tell me the truth, Nick: have I been too silly?"

I shook my head. "Just silly enough."

She laughed and went around to the telephone.

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Dorothy asks where her father is and Nick refers her to Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney. Macaulay calls on Nick and tells him Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting him.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

It is learned Julia was a former sweetheart of a racketeer.

Dorothy appears at Nick's apartment and flashes a gun which she says she got in a speakeasy. She is drunk and Nora puts her to bed. Morelli, a gangster, is suspected in Julia's murder.

Nick is shot by Morelli.

Balks When Girl Tries Plan He Suggested

Asking the boy friend how to act when in LOVE . . . and he and she dancing around to the lilt of good music, and he, poor unsuspecting boob, telling her to be indifferent and independent, and she trying it out on him . . . and what was the result?

Why, he didn't like it.

For he hadn't meant for Nona to experiment on him.

Haven't you ever had just such a thing happen to you? When a fellow preaches, he doesn't include himself as chief example. This is strictly a feminine way of doing things . . . hadn't you ever learned that, Nona?

Miss Brunot

Anyway when Nona acted as he had prescribed, he got hot under the collar, and has been balking ever since. He even has threatened not to come to a party she is giving.

However, she has her chance to explain things, for her girl friend is having everyone up at her house soon. And to Nona, let me say, be sure and get this fellow in the corner and tell him exactly how his own pet method didn't work on him. And if he has a speck of humor, he'll laugh.

He'll learn his lesson, too. No more free advice on the dance floor for him.

PATIENCE NEEDED

PEG is having her serious time, too. A mere acquaintance chanced to drop in to call, and lo, the real boy-friend arrived, too. And mad as a hornet, he was. For he feels sure Peg is double-crossing him. And being in love with her, himself, he imagines all other young fellows are suffering from the same malady. So, Peg is having the time of her young life, getting him in LINE again.

You'll have to be patient, Peg, and try to clear the other young blood out of the home parlor, and by and by, I feel sure your boy-friend will be reasonable. This isn't a real tragedy, Peg, for he does still care. The fact that he has taken this affair so much to heart, indicates where his heart is.

QUESTION OF LOYALTY

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a constant reader of yours, and something very serious has come into my life. My sister, who is two years older than I, has been keeping steady company with a very desirable young man. Nothing much has been said between them, but everyone expects them to marry.

Ever since the night my sister introduced us, he has been trying to get me to go out with him. Although I am very fond of him, I do not want to take him from my sister. I know that since she loves him dearly, that it would break her heart to lose him.

Shall I "date" him or shall I be loyal to my sister?

PUZZLED.

Be loyal to your sister and do not date this fellow. He may really care the most for your sister down deep in his heart, anyway, and all you would be doing by going out with him would be spoiling things for everyone.

DON'T TELL SISTER

You should try to be very indifferent when in the presence of your sister's admirers. It never pays to take a beau from a member of your own family. And under no circumstances tell your sister of her boy friend's perfidity. Girls are peculiar about such things, and she may hold it against you instead of him.

It may not really be such deep laid perfidity in him, you know. He may merely be trying you out. Maybe your sister has boasted to him of your fondness and loyalty to her. You wouldn't want to break such faith.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am going steady with a boy who has practically no education. He has had to work since a mere boy and has had no chance to go to school. The fact that he does not know Latin, chemistry, etc, does not worry me.

It is his grammar. He hasn't the faintest idea of English construction, and as I am graduating from high school I am taking him to dances there. Naturally my friends will not understand my predicament.

READING HASN'T HELPED

You may suggest to me how I can correct him in this. He is independent and proud. He has not told me, he resents criticism, but I know his nature. I have suggested he read certain literary works, but they have not helped him. Please try and give me a logical solution to this query. C. F.

All the reading of books in the world unless they are grammars and composition books will not help this fellow. It will be like the little boy who after having written "I have gone," one hundred times, looked up and saw his teacher busy. So he wrote on a piece of paper: "I have written 'I have GONE' one hundred times. And I have WENT home."

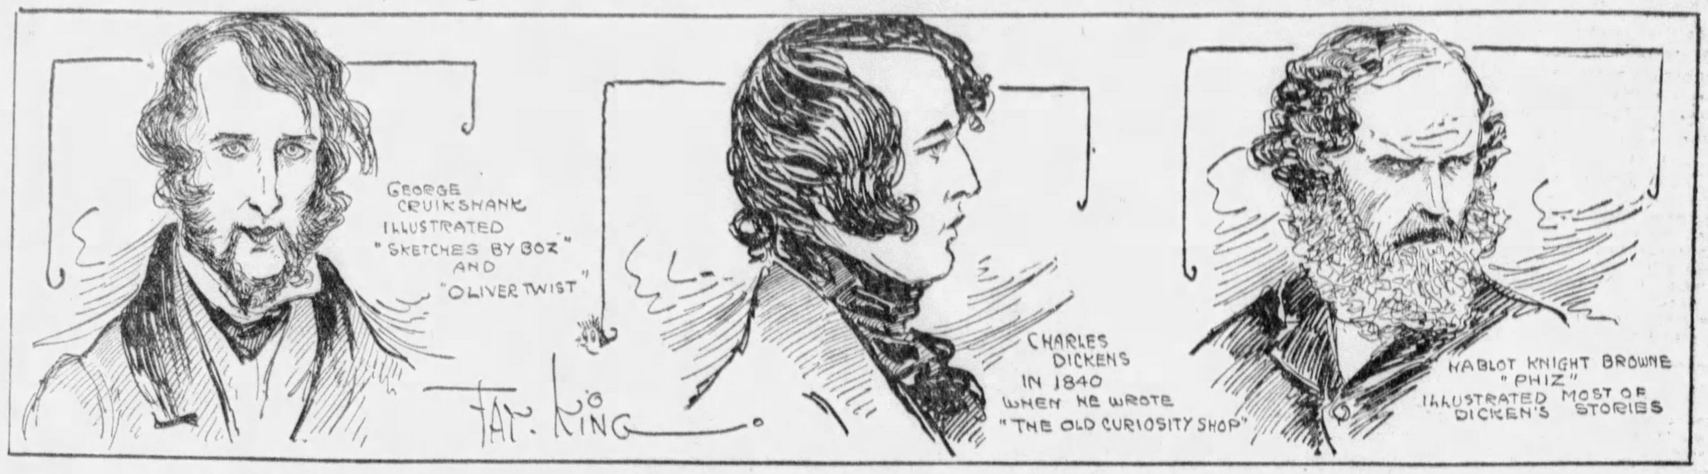
HABIT IS STRONG

I have bad news for you, too. It is, that you simply cannot expect to have this beau of yours a grammarian before these dances come off. Habit is strong in our way of expressing ourselves and even after we know better, we occasionaly lapse under stress of excitement.

Be patient, if you really love this fellow. The fact that he read the books you suggested, shows he likes help. Why not plan, in a nice way, a home course of grammar . . . get him to think it is fun when you correct him. Lay down the common law of good English and in time, who knows, he may be more of an authority than you.

If you think your friends are going to laugh at him, why humiliate him by taking him to these dances. Several evenings without him would be better than to see him put in a bad light.

Fay King Revives a Few of the Immortals of Charles Dickens



By FAY KING

Renewed interest in Charles Dickens has caused many to read again his ever popular volumes.

Dickens' immortality is shared by his original illustrators, of whom George Cruikshank and H. K. Browne "Phiz" are foremost.

Cruikshank was already famous and 20 years older when he illustrated the youthful Dickens' first book, "Sketches by Boz." In Dickens' second book, "Oliver Twist," we see Cruikshank's unforgettable "Oliver," old "Fagin" and "Bill Sykes" with his dog.

A few plates had been made for "Pickwick Papers" when Seymour, the artist, committed suicide. Many applied for his place, among them Thackeray. Browne was chosen, and remained the Dickens illustrator.

The long and happy partnership ended with "The Tale of Two Cities," so that "Phiz" first drew most of Dickens' famous characters.

STYLES STEPPING THROUGH SPRING

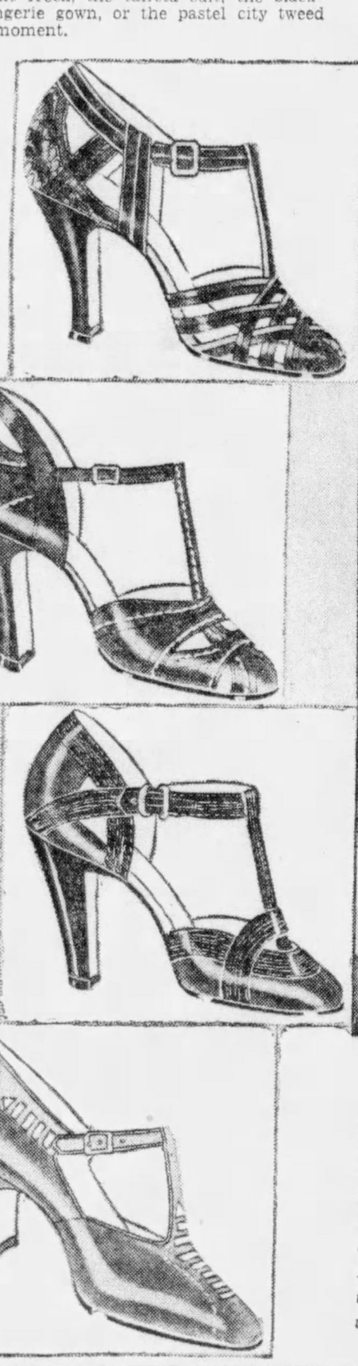
By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT IS A BREAK for women that the cut-out, sandal type of shoe has taken the fancy of prime designers this season. No more flattering kind of foot covering has yet been invented, and despite their fragile look, well built models have plenty of support to offer—plus an air-cooled effect that is comfortable.

* * *

THE CHIC AFTERNOON costume that is blended of elements both practical and festive is paramount just now. The revival of the tea hour as a rite in public places is responsible, and shoes coming along in fashion reflect this trend. They are slippery to look at, but quite competent to deal with cement pavements as well as plush carpets. Skirts are undeniably shorter, for the daytime especially, and a neat ankle and instep set off by ringless hosiery and a really smart dressmaker-detailed shoe is quite as important as a becoming hat. All the shoes on this page are delightfully feminine, really vernal in the 1934 manner. They belong to the new blue tailleur, the print frock, the taffeta suit, the black-with-lingerie gown, or the pastel city tweed of the moment.

All the shoes sketched are of sandal persuasion, and with a T-strap which flatters any instep line. Note the pretty detailing on the backs of the shoes and the wide choice of heels they represent.



Top to bottom the shoes sketched left are: A lizard sandal trimmed with tan and brown leather; light stitching and brown heel. Brown kid T-strap with beige scallop trim. Black kid with stitched patent trim and patent heel. At the bottom, tan kid with slot perforations. Those at the right, top to bottom, are: A black kid model with patent T-strap and cut-outs. Blue kid with white stitched trim over the heel. Black patent with black kid strapping trim. The last model is dark blue kid with light blue kid laced over the edges and under the cut-outs.

How to Keep Well

What to Do About Fever in a Child or Grown-Up

Recently, I received several letters requesting information about the treatment of fever. As a rule, the requests come from mothers who are concerned about fever in a young child. They are anxious to know the best treatment for this condition.

Dr. Copeland

A great deal of responsibility rests upon every mother. She must decide whether her child is sick or well and whether a physician should be called. Bear in mind, that a sick child is usually drowsy, listless, irritable and refuses his food. Of course, these same complaints are seen in the adult who is a victim of fever.

The first thing to do in case of fever is to call the doctor. Fever is not a disease but a sign of some disturbance within the body. Fever may be the first warning of an acute infectious disease, such as scarlet fever, measles, chicken-pox or diphtheria. The skin rash or other characteristic signs of these ailments may not appear for several days.

A temperature higher than 100 is abnormal. Anyone with a fever should remain in bed. Water should be taken frequently. Encourage the drinking of at least two quarts of water daily. It is best to avoid all solid foods unless the doctor prescribes a special diet. Daily movement of the bowels is imperative and is best accomplished by the use of a small soap and water enema. Avoid the use of drastic cathartics.

The patient with a fever should wear ordinary night clothes while he is sick. An extra sweater or bathrobe should be worn when sitting up in bed in a cool room. The windows should be kept open to allow adequate ventilation. Guard against winds and drafts.

A warm sponge bath should be given at least once a day. Keep the body clean. If the fever is very high and the patient is restless, cool water or alcohol may be used.

I am often asked how long a child who has had fever should remain in bed. A good rule to remember is to remain in bed for at least 24 hours after the temperature has become normal. If fever has continued for several days, the patient should remain in bed for three days to a week after his temperature has become normal.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Learning From Opponents

It is rare, indeed, to find a situation where one side at the bridge table has reached a contract of four hearts and an opposing player enters the bidding for the first time with a bid of four spades, confident that he will make the contract or at worst be defeated one trick.

This unusual situation occurred in a recent rubber game in the Experts' Room at Crockford's Club, New York, where Mr. Samuel Fry, Jr., holding the South hand, adopted the policy of "watchful waiting" until he had information enough about the opposing hands to safely enter the bidding himself.

West, dealer.

	♠ A 7 5 4 ♡ Q 7 ◇ 9 6 5 4 2 ♣ A 9
♠ 6 ♡ A K 8 4 2 ◇ A 8 3 ♣ K 10 6 5	North West East South	♠ 8 ♡ 10 9 6 ◇ K Q J 10 7 ♣ Q J 3 2
	♠ K Q J 10 9 3 2 ♡ J 5 3 ◇ — ♣ 8 7 4

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass (1)
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass (2)
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	4 ♠ (3)
Double (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Mr. Fry reasoned that inasmuch as his partner passed and both opponents were bidding, he could safely pass at this time and learn something more about the opposing hands.

2—Again a pass is in order. The opposing players have found that they have at least mild fits in both suits bid by them. Under these circumstances a further bid by West is assured.

3—Mr. Fry reasons that the opposing bidding has not shown hands of tremendous strength and is confident that his partner holds the Ace of spades or the Ace of clubs with some fit in the spade suit and probably only a singleton heart. If North holds either Ace and not more than one heart there is a chance to fufill the contract, but in no event should the penalty be more than one trick.

4—West knows that the partnership can go no further, and the unusual calling strategy of South impels him to believe that the adverse contract can be defeated.

As the hand was played, Mr. Fry made not only the contract but an overtrick as well. West opened the King of hearts and followed with the Ace, thereby establishing the heart Knave in the South hand, upon which the losing club in Dummy was discarded.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Introducing Mother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—How should I introduce my mother, who has married again, to my friends. If I say, "Mother, may I present Mr. Brown," the person being presented doesn't know my mother's name, which, of course, differs from mine. If I say, "This is my mother, Miss Smith," the situation is the same.

2—Being secretary of a club, I have to write the invitations to the speakers, also the thank-you notes that are necessary. I have been using the same kind of paper as this letter is written on, and the same form for the letter. Is this correct?

F.

1—In family introductions, even when the name does differ from ours, it is not customary to mention the name, but it is perfectly correct to do this if we wish. For instance, you may say, "This is my mother, Mrs. Allen, Miss Smith."

2—Your letter paper is very good looking, although it does seem a bit small for anything but quite short notes. However, your handwriting is small, and I think that it would be better, if you use this note paper, for you to spread out your note a bit more. That is, instead of crowding your two pages, as you did in your letter to me, space it so that it covers the four sheets. Don't you think that would be better? Your handwriting is very good and interesting looking. And your letter form is almost perfect.

Mr. Spencer's Threat Quiets Avis

My father is accustomed to instant obedience from everyone, but Lillian nudged me gleefully as he told Avis Arlen, in answer to her theatrical appeal to Hugh, that the one thing she could do for all of us was to go back to her room, lock her door, and stay there until morning.

"Pipe this!" she murmured in my ear, using the inaudible speech which she has perfected. "It ought to be good."

The lights were out in our section of the corridor, and she had turned off the switch of the room lamp when she had opened our door at the first sound of Avis Arlen's voice. But at the head of the stairs the hall lamp was burning brightly, and while no one of the people there could see us, every expression of their faces, every inflection of their voices, was readable and audible.

It was as if we were in a darkened theater watching the actors upon the stage, and I found my nerves tensing as I listened for the reply which Avis would make to my father.

But it was not to him that she spoke. Disregarding him in a way that I do not believe he ever had experienced before, she made a sudden flanking motion and clasped her hands appealingly around the arm of Hugh Grantland, who now had reached the top of the stairs. Swaying sinuously, her body as close to him as she could get it, her face, alluring in its clever make-up, lifted to his, she patently was consciously exerting every bit of feminine lure she possessed in an endeavor to gain the boon she wished.

"Oh, Hugh! Won't you please intercede with Mr. Spencer for me? I am afraid he is terribly angry with me, yet I can't imagine what I have done that is wrong. You see I am so high strung, so sensitive, things affect me so easily, and I simply haven't been able to sleep tonight at all.

"I couldn't help feeling that something terrible might be happening to you, Hugh, and you can't possibly know how queerly it affected me. Of course, I don't want to disturb my mother, but I thought I could go down to the library and read a little while. Please say that I may do that, Hugh; Or—better still—you must be hungry, you and Mr. Spencer both. You don't know what a good cook I am. Wouldn't you like me to rustle you something in the kitchen? It would take but a little time."

I think sheer astonishment held my father motionless while the girl chattered on. But at her final plea to be permitted to cook, he took a quick step toward her, and at the same time Hugh put his hands upon hers, took them from his arm, and then, releasing her hands, abruptly took a step away from her. This left my father facing her.

"I am sorry," Hugh muttered as he moved away, "but Mr. Spencer's word is the only law in this house."

"I warn you, Miss Arlen, that I am not a patient man," my father said, his words like icicles. "There is grave business afoot in this house tonight—business which calls for attention upon the part of myself and Maj. Grantland—and you are hindering us greatly. Now I give you 30 seconds to make a choice. Will you go back to your room quietly, now, or must I waken your mother and ask her to take you in hand? I warn you that if she cannot control you, I shall put you in a small room back here and lock you up until morning."

"Do you imagine he knows?" I murmured to Lillian, referring to the claustrophobia from which we knew Avis suffered. "I never said anything to him about it."

"He knows everything," Lillian answered in the same way. "And he's certainly turned the trick. "Look at her! She's like a deflated balloon."

RAIN PREVENTS FINAL GAME OF BUC-BRAVE SERIES

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Pirates Keep Up Record. Not Edged in Any Series. Hornsby's Dope Wrong.
Bishop in 1,000 Walks. Woes of Broadcasters. Tennis as Marriage Bar.

The postponement of two games in the series with the Braves, one of which cost Pittsburgh first place in the National League race by reason of another victory for the Cubs over the Giants meanwhile, assured that the Pirates will go East tomorrow night with a record held by no other club in their circuit. That is the distinction of not having lost a series this season. The busy bats of Arky Vaughan, Gus Suhr, Paul Waner and others have made up so effectively for unsteady pitching that the Rovers have yet to lose a series to any opponent.

Arky Vaughan

And they have played nine series to date, meeting every other club in the league. First they took two out of three games from the Cardinals; then they split two games with the Reds, and since the home opener they have broken even in two tilts with the Cards, divided two with the Reds, captured two out of three from the Cubs, two out of three from the Giants, three straight from the Dodgers, and two out of three from the Phils, while the curtailment of the Brave engagement to one bout assured the Gibsons of a one-game edge, as they won the opener on Sunday. Of the nine series decided up to date, the Bucs won seven and tied two. They are alone in the National League in not having lost a series, and only the Yankees have equalled that record in the American.

BONURA MAKES HORNSBY'S TIP LOOK SICK

Rogers Hornsby may be a little less hasty in the future in exposing what he believes to be weak spots in new major league players. In a radio talk one night, Hornsby mentioned having discovered, by close observation of the youngster's swing, that the hitting weakness of Zeke Bonura, rookie first baseman of the White Sox, was a slow curve. The older White Sox players were incensed, declaring that if Hornsby had got wise to anything like that he should have kept it to himself instead of setting the whole American League on a young fellow who had done him no harm.

But Bonura had a better way of getting back at the Rajah. First of all, Buck Newsom, of Hornsby's own Browns, tossed him a beautiful slow curve, and Zeke banged it into the stands, Monte Pearson, of the Indians, acting on the same tip, also fed Bonura a slow curve, and the ball left the premises immediately. Earl Whitehill, of the Senators, was the next to try a lingering bender on the young Texan, and again Zeke socked it out of the lot. Now the White Sox are enjoying a loud laugh at Hornsby's expense.

BISHOP PAST THOUSAND MARK IN WALKS

Max Bishop, champion walker of the American League, has kept up his waiting tactics successfully since being transferred to the Red Sox from the A's, and recently he carried his records in that department to a notable point by drawing his 1,000th base on balls. As far as the total is concerned, it is by no means a record, but as measured by the period of time in which it was rolled up it makes Bishop an outstanding performer in the history of the game.

Max Bishop

And even in the number of walks, only three players have surpassed the Red Sox second baseman. The highest mark of all, of course, is held by Babe Ruth, who has gone to first base on called balls 1,938 times. The National League record is 1,038, established by Max Carey, and the only other player ahead of Bishop is Rogers Hornsby, with 1,020 to his credit. But this is the twenty-first season for Ruth, the twentieth for Hornsby, and Carey played 19 years to amass his total, whereas Bishop is in only his eleventh campaign. Probably he will pass both Carey and Hornsby in the near future. Of course, he has no chance to overtake Ruth, but there is a distinction between their totals in that Bishop gets his walks through having a remarkable eye and by waiting out and working the pitchers, while a great number of Ruth's passes have been intentional.

WHEN ANNOUNCERS HAVE THEIR TROUBLES

A sympathetic soul says he will pity the poor radio announcers if things ever reach the point where they will have to give move-by-move descriptions of the international chess championship matches. In the latest world title match, for example, the broadcasters would have been horrified to note that one of the contestants was named Bogolbujow. But fortunately he didn't unhorse the reigning champion Alekhine, who is easier to pronounce but harder to beat.

The inroads of tongue-twisting names into the college football lineups have made life a burden to the announcers in recent years, and, far from holding out any promise of relief, the coming season threatens to make things worse than ever. Imagine the embarrassment of the boys who have to call out the plays when Doc Spears, for instance, puts a flock of his unpronounceable gridders on the field for dear old Wisconsin. Among them may be mentioned Haukedahl, Ockerhauser, Jankowski, Deanovich, Purceti and Golemgeske. It has been suggested that if they are as tough to stop as they are to articulate, the rest of the Big Ten may well be pitied.

HOLDS MARRIAGE AND TENNIS DON'T MIX

Not that she has any particular woman tennis player of the past or present in mind, understand, but Miss Alice Marble insists that for women marriage and tennis don't mix. The No. 3 feminine net ace of the United States made that statement emphatically just before she sailed for Europe with the rest of the American Wightman Cup team. Miss Marble says she's not even engaged, but when she decides to get married she'll quit tennis. She remarks that there isn't time for both, that you can't be domestic and tour the courts as well, and she thinks it has been proved in the past, without mentioning any names.

Alice Marble

So for the present, the blond Californian, who will not be 21 until September 28, is giving all of her attention to tennis. She is playing a steadier game than ever, and with less effort, and says her fondest dreams will be realized if she can help win the Wightman Cup matches and then come back and capture the United States crown now in the possession of Helen Jacobs. Miss Marble admits she has one other ambition, her chief aim in life being to sing over the radio regularly—with adequate compensation. Alice and the other members of the Wightman Cup squad won't have much time to think about anything except tennis during the present trip. All of them will compete in the French championships, next participating in a one-day team match against the tri-color forces, and then will come the Wightman Cup matches and Wimbledon.

By JESS CARVER

From now on, the boys will have to find a new nickname for Pitt's Panthers, the football Panthers, at least.

Since 1928, when the university discarded the old blue jerseys with the narrow golden striped sleeves and adopted the nifty gold sweaters with the blue resin stripes and vice versa, the Pitts have been known as the Golden Panthers and have been recognized from coast to coast as one of the best dressed elevens in the game.

TO WEAR WHITE

This fall, however, the Panthers will appear in new trappings. Following the lead set by Pacific Coast teams and taken up by elevens in the South and Mid-West, the Pitts will adopt plain white jerseys, with two narrow blue bands on the sleeves. They'll wear these outfits at home and on the road, except where they meet teams who also sport white outfits. In that case they'll go back to the plain blue jerseys with the old numbers fore and aft.

Maybe we can call 'em the white hopes.

Don't be surprised, either, when you glimpse the Panther eleven in action next fall, if Dr. Sutherland's charges show you a shift. The Doctor has been working on one in spring drills and may employ same to start all plays.

At the request of the Carnegie Tech officials, the Pitt-Tech track meet, which was to have been staged informally this afternoon, has been called off.

If they can take Notre Dame here Saturday, Coach Carl Olson's charges will complete an undefeated dual meet season. The test against Notre Dame will be by far the stiffest the Blue and Gold has been called upon to face. So far, Penn State, Temple and West Virginia have been trampled, and easily, too.

TEAMS HAVE BALANCE

Both the Panther and Irish squads have unusual balance. Neither boasts any really outstanding individual performers, and sport strength in positions where the other is weak.

The Pitt golf team, under the leadership of Capt. Regis Wolff, gets its biggest test of the season this afternoon, when Wash-Jeff's linksmen are met over the St. Clair Country Club course.

BANTAMS ORGANIZE

At the spring meeting on the Bantamweight Football Associations held at Columbus, O., plan for the season were formulated and step taken for the formation of a national association. The newly-organized Western Pennsylvania Bantamweight Football Association was represented at the meeting by the president, T. C. Hayden, and secretary, T. A. Bamford.

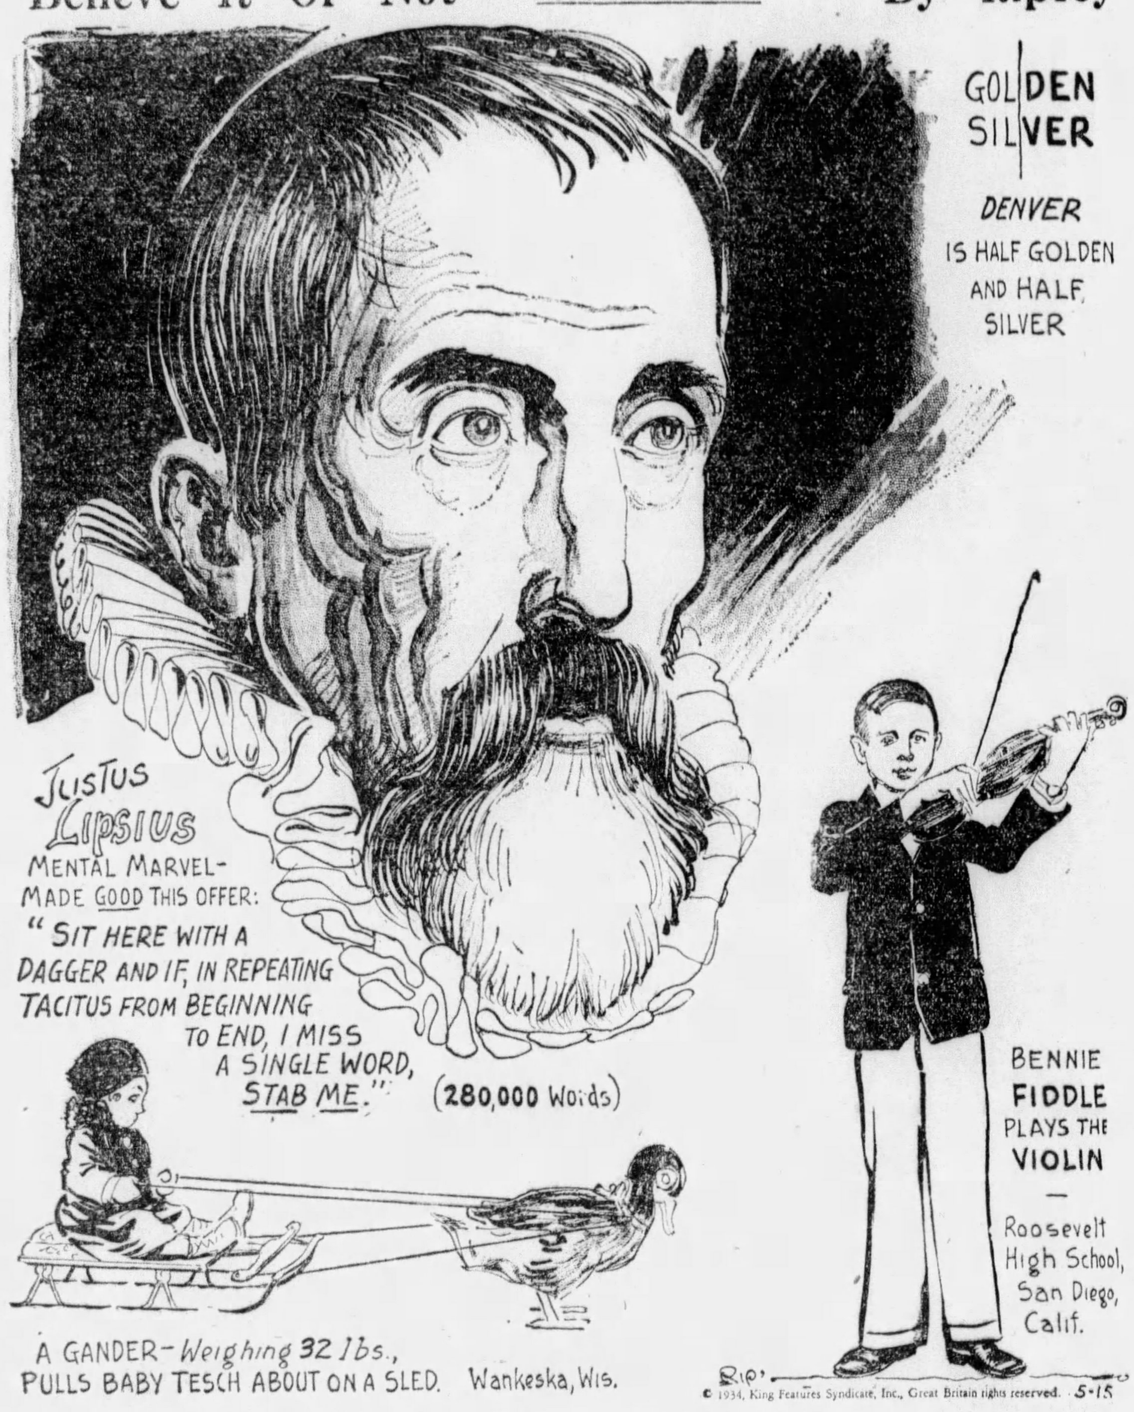
Believe It Or Not By Ripley

(Reg. by U. S. Patent Office)



EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE BIG BAD WOLF—"The Beast of the Gevaudan" (Department of Lozere, France) was a wolf of giant size and strength. Its depredations have been accurately recorded in French government documents. Between January 15, 1764, when it devoured its first victim, and September 10, 1765, when it was killed, it devoured 66 persons and wounded 71. It never attacked a man, but preyed upon women and children, who always were taken unawares. King Louis XV, of France, finally put a price of 6,000 livres upon its head and dispatched his chief harquebusier, Antoine, who killed it and presented its embalmed body to the King.

PIRATES MEET DETROIT HERE TOMORROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Rain and wet grounds prevented the final clash of the three-game series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves at Forbes Field this afternoon.

It marked the second straight day the Pirates and Braves were forced to remain idle because of inclement weather.

The postponed game will be played off as part of a double-header on Tuesday, August 28.

The Pirates wind up their long home stand here tomorrow when they meet the Detroit Americans in an exhibition game at Forbes Field. Tomorrow night they leave on their first eastern invasion of the season.

HOLD BIG EDGE

Gibby's diamond stars have grabbed the decision in eight of the 10 bouts with the Giants, Dodgers, Phillies and Braves. The showing, therefore, is beyond the fondest expectations of the pilot and his players, who are right on the heels of the fast-going Cubs, of Chicago.

The Bruins added insult to injury against Bill Terry in the only game staged in the National League yesterday. The Chicago triumph had the effect to pulling the Cubs up in front of the Pirates, who were looking down at the other seven contenders for a brief period.

GIANTS LOSE TO CUBS

And what of the Giants? Memphis Bill's boys have been shellacked no less than eight times in a dozen starts on this side of the Alleghenies. That the world champions are pining for home-cooking goes without saying, yet after they do get their feet under the family table they must be prepared to hold the fort against the western clubs who start their eastern invasion Thursday.

CHILLYSAUCE

The Pirate casualties are all looking up, including Capt. Pie Traynor. Harold Joseph is tickled over the improvement felt in his right arm. He's apt to get a chance to exercise it in the impending invasion of the East.

Heinie Meine left his bed, but not his board yesterday. Heinie had a seige of the grip. He will be able to accompany the club on the eastern jaunt.

Earl Grace says his damaged finger is just about healed. Earl's tendency to sock balls to right field may pay him a premium in the eastern jaunt, especially in Philly and New Yawk, where the fences are close.

All clubs must be down to the 23-player limit by tonight. A flock of rookies and quite a few vets will sit up until the midnight hour to make sure they are among those present before they hit the hay.

If you have wondered what the Pirates do to put in the time on an off day, consider the first five men in the batting order.

Lloyd Waner has a baby son who is trying to walk; Brother Paul has a five-year-old lad with enough zip to wear out a couple of adults; Fred Lindstrom's two little boys give him a better workout than he ever got in California; Arky Vaughan has a year-old daughter who can cover almost as much ground as Arky, and Gus Suhr has to be able to go to his right and left to keep up with his baby boy and girl. Woodie Jensen also has a couple of champions.

REGATTA BOARD TO CONFER

A meeting of the committee in charge of the William Randolph Hearst-Oakmont Boat Club Gold Cup outboard motorboating regatta has been called for Thursday night at 9 o'clock in the quarters of the club.

All members are urged to be present to conclude important business in connection with the preliminary arrangements.

MEET CALLED OFF

The Central district track and field meet of the Pittsburgh grade schools, scheduled this afternoon at the Schenley oval, was called off on account of rain. A new date will be chosen for the meet.

PARKS LEADS NATIONAL OPEN QUALIFIERS AT FOX CHAPEL

PRO STARS WIN SEVEN LOCAL POSITIONS

By TOM BIRKS

For the second year in succession, Sam Parks, Jr., young professional at the South Hills Country Club, paced the field in the local qualifying round for the National Open tournament. Yesterday, over the links of the Fox Chapel Golf Club, the former captain of the University of Pittsburgh golf team, shot 146 for 36 holes to lead a field of 62 of the leading professionals and amateurs of the tri-state district by three strokes.

Right on the heels of Parks yesterday was Ted Luther, of the Valley Heights Country Club. Ted flashed a 75 in the morning to share the lead with Rader Jewett and Emil Loeffler, and then compiled a 74 in the second round for a 149 score.

JEWETT THIRD

Rader Jewett, the pro from Cedar Rocks at Wheeling, W. Va., was third with 75-77-152. Vince Eldred and Emil Loeffler tied for fourth with 153s; Charley Manning, of Shannopin, played himself into sixth place with 154, and Al Alcroft, the Youngstown (O.) pro, filled last place with 155.

The seven pros will play at Merion Cricket Club Philadelphia, June 7, 8 and 9, in the open.

Conditions were anything but ideal yesterday, throughout the day a steady drizzling rain fell, making the fairways and greens skiddy, a factor that had a tendency to make the scores mount higher than was expected. Parks turned in the only sub-par round of the day.

Eldred had to stage a brilliant comeback in the afternoon to qualify. The Highland spark plug took a 7 on the first hole in the morning round and never really got started. The West Penn Open champion rallied in the afternoon, however, with a typical Eldred round for a 74, two shots over par, and was safe.

YOUNG MISSES

Knox Young, the young West Penn amateur champion from the Shannopin Country Club, deserved to qualify. Knox flashed a 76 in the morning, including an eight and a six on the eighteenth hole. He missed a short putt only 12 inches from the cup.

The big surprises was the failure to qualify of Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, and Pete O'Hara, the Westmoreland Country Club shotmaker.

At the conclusion of the morning round it appeared as if the amateur contingent was going to dominate the tourney. Knox Young, Jim Fownes and young Tom Jamison had broken 80, with Fred Brand, Jr., Beverly Shriver and Jack Benson within hailing distance of the leaders. The simon pures, however, faded away in the second round. The scores:

Sam Parks, Jr., South Hills	70	76—146
Ted Luther, Valley Heights	75	74—149
Rader Jewett, Elm Grove, W. Va.	75	77—152
Emil Loeffler, Oakmont	75	78—153

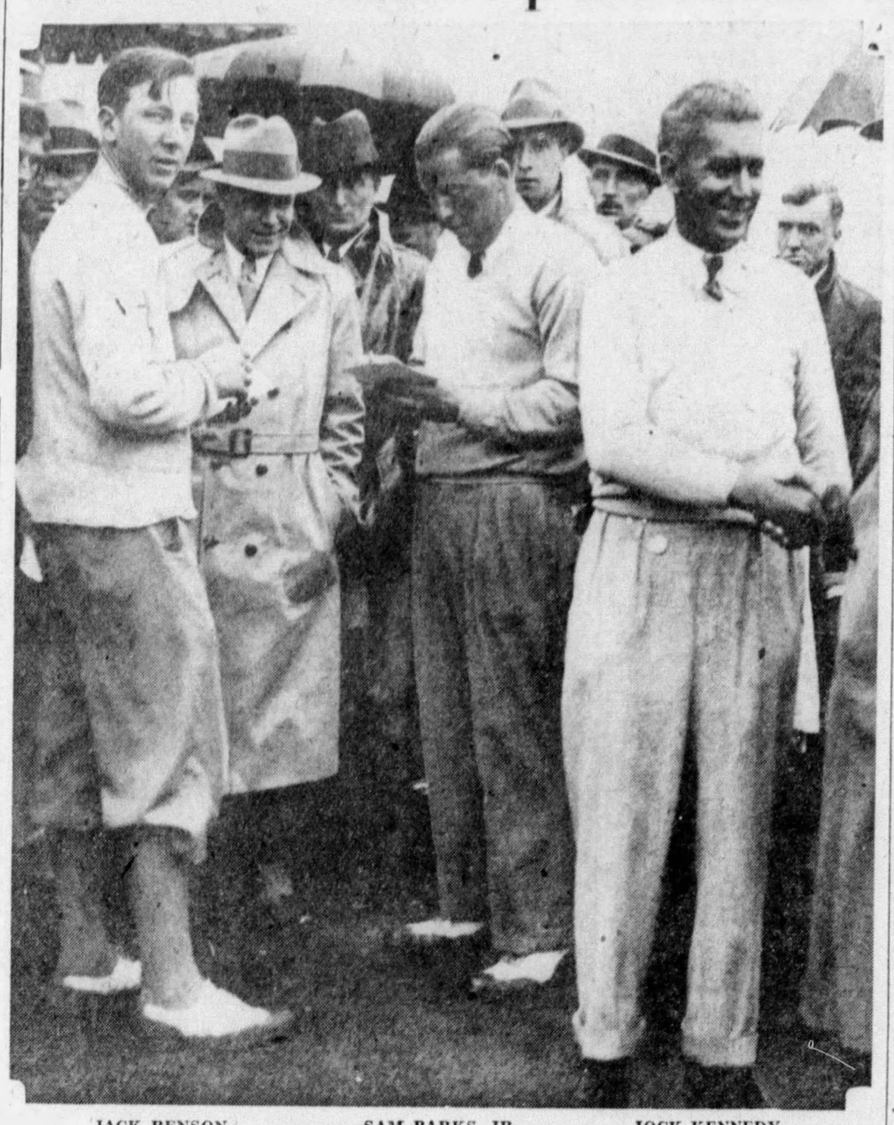
Medalist Totals Up His Score



JACK BENSON — SAM PARKS, JR. — JOCK KENNEDY

Parks, South Hills Country Club professional, who for the second year led the local qualifiers for the National Open tournament, totaling up his score of 141 at Fox Chapel yesterday. Benson and Kennedy played over the course with him. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

Turnesa and George Voigt, former Walker Cup player, outside the qualifying limit. Another well-known amateur, Maurice McCarthy, Jr., was shut out in the Cleveland district.

Otherwise, there were few failures among the game's elite. Such professionals as Paul Runyan, Wiffy Cox, George Von Elm and Tom Creavy were successful at New York, as were the amateurs, Gene Homans and Rudy Knepper. Ed Dudley and J. Wood Platt, the amateur, captured two of the 16 places open at Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia district round was completed today when Roland MacKenzie, Washington pro, qualified with a 76-75—151. MacKenzie was forced to complete his round today when darkness interfered last night.

TENNIS LEAGUE MAKEUP SET FOR SEASON

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

While rain yesterday obviated possibility of competition in varsity matches that would have brought West Virginia to Trees Field courts for a contest with Pitt and Westminster to the Bluff for a battle with Duquesne, Pittsburgh Tennis Association executive committeemen assembled at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club and decided finally that the tri-divisional P. T. A. Inter-Club League race will get under way a week from next Saturday, said date being May 26. The jousting will terminate on July 21.

Chairman Howard Burgwin, of the sanction and schedule group, is at work at present on slight revision of the Section II and Section III slates, but promises completion of the job and release of the cards by tomorrow. The last-minute changes have been entailed by request of the Westinghouse Club that its second team, the Electrics, be placed in the third sector of the wheel, instead of in the second, where it would have been forced to mix with its confreres of the Westinghouse first string aggregation.

The Westinghouse suggestion was acted upon favorably at yesterday's session, with result that the Electricians and Edgewood have switched places, the former dropping to Section III and the latter advancing to Section II. That this will prove a salutary move all around is indicated by the belief that elevation of Edgewood into the second division will mean that the Suburbanites will be able to induce a number of stronger performers to align with them than they could have otherwise signed.

Kingfish on Way Back to Chicago

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—There'll be no Kingfish Levinsky-Art Lasky fight here tonight. The Kingfish, who disappeared on Saturday, is said to be somewhere on his way back home to Chicago, where relatives and other friends are anxiously awaiting his arrival. They have heard he is sick. His sister-manager, Lena Levy, said before he left that he hadn't trained properly and was not in condition to fight.

The promoter is getting ready to sue for the return of advance money and the Commission is set to suspend Levinsky.

FORMER OPEN CHAMPS FAIL

Five former holders of the title failed to qualify for the National Open golf championship in the annual sectional trials, conducted in 21 widely scattered districts yesterday, but top-flight stars generally had little trouble making the grade.

Fred McLeod, who won the National Open as long ago as 1908, failed to qualify in the Richmond district; George Sargent, who won in 1909, was among the also-rans at Atlanta, as was Chick Evans, 1916 champion, at Chicago. Cyril Walker and Willie MacFarlane, titleholders in 1924 and 1925, respectively, both were eliminated in the New York district, where the day's results also found Joe

GROVE REVIVES RED SOX FLAG HOPES

STAR SOUTHPAW BRILLIANT IN RELIEF ROLE

Associated Press.

The stock of the Boston Red Sox, fading recently on the major league market, is rising again, and the reason is the same impetus that sent the Sox chances kiting in the first place—Lefty Robert Moses Grove.

For Robert Moses, the Lonaconing Lightning, apparently is back in the pitching condition that won him ranking among the best left-handers in baseball's history, as well as a price tag of $100,000 that Tom Yawkey paid when he bought the Maryland Bean Pole from Connie Mack last winter.

LEFTY SHOWS FORM

Lefty didn't win a ball game yesteray, but he proved he has recovered from the sore arm that has been shrouding both him and Boston's populace in gloom since the first week of spring training.

Grove picked up the gauntlet against the White Sox, relieving Henry Johnson in the third inning with one out, the bases full, and the score 5 to 0 against Boston. The White Sox won, 8 to 2, behind four-hit pitching by George Earnshaw, but Grove, pitching with much of his old skill, accomplished the following:

He allowed but three hits in six and two-thirds innings, walked one and fanned two. He was scored on twice before he got the side out in the sixth, through a walk and a forceout, though the runs aren't charged against him because he took over with the bases full. He allowed one run of his own making in the seventh when he dropped Eddie Morgan's toss to first base on a ground ball that would have retired the side.

Earnshaw's victory was the first complete game he has pitched this season and marked his hundredth victory in the majors.

WARNEKE COPS FIFTH

Lon Warneke gathered in his fifth victory of the season as the Cubs beat down the World Champion Giants for the second straight day in a 3-to-2, 10-inning thriller that alone survived the rain in the National League. With two on base, Chuck Klein got to young Hal Schumacher for a double in the tenth after Dolph Camilli had tied the score in the ninth.

Vic Sorrell, Detroit southpaw, snuffed out the Senators, 5 to 0, with only two hits in the only other game of the day, called because of rain after six innings. Al Crowder lasted less than two innings as the American League champions slid down into the second division.

All other games were washed out by the rain.

LARY TRADED TO RED SOX

NEW YORK, May 15.—(AP.)—Lyn Lary, infielder for whom the New York Yankees paid $50,000 in 1927 when he was purchased from the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League, today was traded to the Boston Red Sox in exchange for Fred Muller, recruit infielder, and an unannounced sum of cash.

79 Horses Named For American Derby

CHICAGO, May 15.—(AP.)—Seventy-nine 3-year-olds, including the first three finishers in the Kentucky Derby, Cavalcade, Discovery and Agrarian, have been nominated for the American Derby, Washington Park's $25,000 added feature, which will be run June 2.

High Quest, which scored over its stablemate, Cavalcade, in the Preakness last Saturday, was not nominated. Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable named two others, Time Clock and Anarchy, however.

Rab to Undergo Operation on Leg

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 15.—(AP.)—Rabbit Maranville is in General Hospital to "tune up,' as he expressed it, for an operation Thursday on an imperfectly healed fractured leg bone.

When the cast was taken off his left leg last week, an X-ray showed the break in the smaller bone had parted a fraction of an inch while it had been in the cast. Maranville's physician said it might be necessary to wire the break together to insure proper knitting. The break in the large bone was healing perfectly.

U. S. Girl Loses In British Golf

Softball an Ideal Game For Girl Athletes

SOFTBALL ENTRY BLANK

Amateur Softball Tournament Editor,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

Please enter my team in your Western Pennsylvania Amateur Softball Tournament.

..... (Team) ..... (Manager).

(Upon receipt of entry, cards to be filled in with additional information will be sent to managers.)

Softball, the new game being introduced in the Pittsburgh district by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur tournament this summer, with the winner in the senior division going to Chicago to play in the National tournament at the World Fair, is seen as the coming sport for girls as well as boys, and is gradually sweeping through the East, after having become firmly established in the Middle West and West.

BOOSTED BY WRITER

Here's what Janet Owen, writing in a New York newspaper, has to say in its behalf so far as the girls are concerned:

"Another new sport. The year has seen the introduction of battleboard tennis by Miss Mary K. Browne, former national tennis champion, and a quick pick-up of interest in it among women's colleges and recreation grounds. Lacrosse, comparatively new for women here, has boomed through the visit of the English touring team. Fencing, archery and badminton have continued their comeback in popularity. Women's squash racquets has moved a long step ahead. And now another sport presents itself with credentials of popular approval from the West.

"Softball, a modified form of professional baseball, has come out of the West to capture the interest of eastern girls, who have already begun to adopt it on metropolitan campuses, and at industrial and recreational centers.

"Softball started in Canada. Interest in it throughout the Dominion has grown so fast that leagues have been formed, with women playing to crowds of 10,000. Such extravagances are not likely to develop here, where the trend in women's sports is toward people playing instead of watching, but those who are already teaching the game in the West believe American tens of thousands will soon be playing softball.

BALL PITCHED UNDERHAND

"In Canada girls play the game with a large leather-covered ball, the pitcher, first base and third base guardians using gloves as aids to stop the ball. The catcher is protected by a mask. The ball is pitched underhand. The rules are the same as those of the official organized game, but the diamond is shorter.

"With increased leisure time resulting from NRA codes and legislation, the need for more recreational activities is a problem in this country now seriously consideration by community leaders both in small and large cities. Softball is pointed out as a game which can be played on a minimum of space for an outdoor team game, and thus as one of great value to the future expanded program of athletics for adults. Playgrounds, now idle in this city and elsewhere because they are too small for lacrosse, soccer, field hockey and regular baseball, can be used for softball.

"Experiments in working out an adaptation of the game for use in women's colleges and high schools are to be conducted this summer at Camp Oquago, Andes, N. Y., where a group of girls prominent in college sports and interested in the new game are planning to undertake a modification of softball for suitability to school and college physical education programs. Their hope is that girls who come out of college and school knowing the game may not only play it later for their own leisure-time enjoyment, but can teach it to others in their own communities."

SEE GAME'S POSSIBILITIES

"Miss Frances Froatz, director of physical education for girls at New York University, believes the game has exceptional possibilities. She says:

"'Softball sounds very interesting. It will enable the girls who are seeking more virile sports to have a broader choice of activities. I want to try it out here next fall.'

"Miss Anna Goldman, director of the Thomas Jefferson High School health education department, believes that soft ball should prove the most popular spring sport on the high school program.

"Miss Edith Fuggrelli, captain of the New York University varsity basketball team; Miss Betty Richey, captain of the Radcliffe College basketball team and a member of both the all-America field hockey and lacrosse team, and Miss Muriel Carr, captain of the Radcliffe College field hockey team, will take charge of the experiment in adapting the game to school and college use at Camp Oquago this summer."

DIVISION FOR GIRLS

There is a division in the Sun-Telegraph's tournament for girls' teams. There is no age restriction for girls' competition. School girls and young women are eligible in the same group. So go ahead and organize your teams and send in your entry blanks. It is hoped to have girls' teams representing offices, banks, industrial plants, playgrounds and other organizations in the competition. No longer is it necessary for the fair sex to sit back and wish they could play baseball like their brothers. Here is a game they CAN play, and the Sun-Telegraph is happy to be the medium through which it is being brought to them.

MORE TEAMS ENTER

Wagner Pirates, of North Side, Larry Elm, manager.
Comets, of North Side, Richard Payne, manager.
Soirees, of South Side, T. Stevenson, manager.

MAX AND PRIMO WORK HARD

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 15.—(INS.)—Rain did not prevent Maxie Baer from going through his workout here yesterday. The Californian, who will meet Primo Carnera for the world heavyweight title at the Madison Square Garden Bowl on June 14, merely invited his trio of sparring partners indoors and continued to pummel them unmercifully.

In all, Baer boxed five rounds, two with Dynamite Jackson, two with Cecil Harris and one with Al Trueman, of San Diego. Jackson stepped from the ring with a bloody nose. Harris was given a long rest before resuming in the second round and Trueman was cuffed through the ropes.

PRIMO AT WORK

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., May 14. — (INS.) — Primo Carnera started his second week of training for his forthcoming title fight with Max Baer on June 14 by increasing his activities and begging Trainer Billy De Foe for longer workouts.

Corn Griffin, Florida heavyweight, joined the camp yesterday and sparred three fast rounds with the champion, the best workouts Carnera has had so far. Da Preem mixed it with Chester Matan for another three rounds and asked for three minutes more which the tiring Matan granted.

BENNY PICKS BARNEY

U. S. DAVIS CUP SELECTIONS ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK, May 15.—(AP.)—Frank Xavier Shields, George Martin Lott, Jr., and John Van Ryn, all veterans of the international tennis wars, and big Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles, making his debut as a cup player, have been named by the United States as the team to meet Canada in the first round of North American zone Davis Cup competition.

The matches will be played on the grass courts of the Wilmington Country Club, Wilmington, Del., May 24, 25 and 26. The winner will meet Mexico, only other team in the zone, at Baltimore May 30, 31 and June 2 for the right to play in the interzone final at Wimbledon.

Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., other members of the squad asked to report for training under the direction of Capt. R. Norris Williams at the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, were not considered for the first round of play. Wood has had no tournament competition this spring and Allison is nursing a sprained ankle, injured in practice at Washington.

The official announcement made no mention of Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, diminutive Atlantan, No. 7 in the national rating, who has whipped Shields, Stoefen and Lott in recent tournaments and thereby projected his candidacy for the international team.

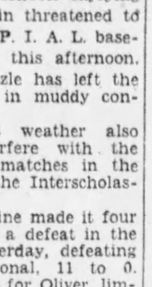
HonusSays:

By HONUS WAGNER

To the Sports Editor:

A lot of people who a few years ago were thinking they would like to be as rich as Insull must be having funny thoughts now. There is some comfort in not being too rich. But a lot of poor people get in trouble, too, so I guess it's six of one and half-a-dozen of another, only the rich ones break into the newspapers because they are news to everyone and the poor ones news only to their friends and relations.



Honus Wagner

"You can have all the riches you want until you are 60 years old, but at the end of that time you must fall from your throne and be in disgrace and stand trial in which you may or may not be found guilty. Or you must be poor all your life, but no disgrace will ever come. Which do you choose?"

Regards,
HONUS WAGNER.

STOCKS RALLY AS SHORTS COVER UP

NEW YORK, May 15.—(AP.)—Deflationary fears were not so much in the fore of today's stock market and further rallying tendencies were shown by most of the recently depressed categories.

The appearance of some timid "bargain hunters" and sporadic short covering was encouraging to those who hoped that equities were within the neighborhood of the bottom of the past three weeks' decline. At the same time, enthusiasm was noticeably restrained and dullness was the rule throughout the greater part of the session.

Another recovery in grains, together with the steadiness of other major commodities, may have aided sentiment. Wheat moved up around 2 cents a bushel as drought conditions continued severe in the Northwest. Cotton, rubber and silver exhibited mild improvement. Bonds displayed signs of getting back some of their recent losses. International dollar rates were again narrow.

News developments appeared to be without any exceptional influence. Washington was still being watched for trading cues. Market commentators spoke of the improved technical position of the list as a whole. More margin calls were said to have been met without any great difficulty.

Relative firmness of some of the building and allied stocks reflected the President's message to Congress outlining a four-point program providing for federal insurance of repair and construction mortgages on homes and certificates issued by building and loan associations.

The financial district also took note of the favorable action by the Senate on the bill providing some $530,000,000 in direct loans from the Federal Reserve banks and Reconstruction Finance Corporation to solvent business enterprises to tide them over the present credit stress.

More evidence of the plethora of idle funds in the banks of the country was seen in the announcement of the Farm Credit Administration that, effective tomorrow, the interest rate on loans by the federal intermediate credit banks will be reduced from 2½ to 2 per cent.

With business failures throughout the country declining weekly, Dun's insolvency index for the first week of May was lower than it has been at that time or for any month in any year since 1920. Standing at 59.3, it compared with 113.7 a year ago and 158.6 for the same period of 1932.

TRADE BUYING AIDS COTTON

NEW YORK, May 15.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 3 points decline in response to lower Liverpool cables, which was partly offset by trade buying. May, 11.16; July, 11.22; October, 11.37; December, 11.50; January, 11.56; March, 11.67.

There was some Southern selling here at the opening, while houses with Liverpool connections also had selling orders and there was scattering liquidation. The offerings were light, however, and the opening action of the stock market brought in a little additional buying right after the call from local or commission house sources which sent July up from 11.21 to 11.29 or about 5 points net higher.

Business continued quiet, but the tone has generally steady in sympathy with the action of the wheat and stock markets. Contracts appeared to be comparatively scarce and scattered buying from trade and commission house sources sent July up to 11.36 and December to 11.64, or about 12 points net higher, with the market quiet at midday.

LIVERPOOL, May 15.—Cotton, 14,000 bales, including 5,500 American. Spot quiet; prices five points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.66; good middling, 6.36; strict middling, 6.21; middling, 6.06; strict low middling, 5.91; low middling, 5.66; strict good ordinary, 5.46; good ordinary, 5.16. Futures closed steady. May, 5.85; July, 5.87; October, 5.81; December, 5.79; January, 5.79; March, 5.79.

Business Treated Unfairly

By B. C. FORBES

IS THIS playing fair?

Bureaucrats at Washington get out for publication all sorts of reports, findings, figures reflecting unfavorably upon business interests without first giving them opportunity to offer explanation or defense.

Mr. Forbes

But when a report reflects upon some Washington bureau or bureaucrats, it is not immediately published, but is first submitted to the bureau or bureaucrats criticized, and they are given the privilege of publishing an explanation or defense simultaneously with the publishing of the criticisms.

If it is fair to business and industry to issue to the newspapers official criticisms without affording business or industry opportunity to offer defense the same day the criticisms are made public, why is it not fair to subject bureaus and bureaucrats to exactly the same treatment?

For example, the so-called "profits" of the New York Stock Exchange brokers were recently spread across the country without affording the brokers the slightest opportunity for accompanying the figures with an explanation.

But when the Darrow committee, officially appointed, found things to criticize about the operations of NRA, was the report first given to the public without comment or explanation?

It was not.

IN THIS INSTANCE, the criticisms were first submitted to the criticized, and opportunity afforded them to give the public a defense along with the accusations.

Apparently, Washington believes that business and industry and non-bureaucrats are not entitled to the same rights as bureaucrats.

How anyone at Washington can contend that such a discriminating course is equitable and honorable, passes the comprehension of the ordinary citizen.

Surely, if it is equitable and honorable to broadcast allegations against men of affairs without offering them a chance to answer criticisms, it is equally equitable and honorable to subject bureaucrats to exactly the same treatment.

How long will the American public, always credited with an innate sense of fairness, tolerate or uphold such discrimination between taxeaters and taxpayers?

THE PREVAILING uneasiness over how things are now going at Washington was again reflected yesterday on the security and commodity exchanges.

My own guess is that the down swing in securities has already gone far enough and that events at Washington will not prove as undilutedly bearish as seems to be commonly anticipated.

I rather think that as soon as Congress adjourns, President Roosevelt will lean towards reassuring the business, the industrial, the investment world and that by fall existing nervousness will be supplanted by hopefulness.

SENATOR COUZENS, whose colossal fortune is invested largely in tax-exempt securities, has been the most vehement advocate of inflicting tremendous taxes on large incomes. Similarly, lawmakers from states which pay practically no estate tax have been the most ardent champions of inflicting upon the rest of the country heavier and heavier estate taxes.

Senator Borah's state, Idaho, paid to the federal government in 1932 (the latest figures which are available) exactly $90 in estate taxes. The six states, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, paid, altogether, the total of $23,877. New York alone paid $8,297,977. California, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York, combined, paid $15,999,805, of the grand total for the whole country of $22,351,207.

How irresistible is the temptation to gore the other fellow's ox!

PRESIDENT W. P. KENNEY, of the Great Northern Railway, told me the other day:

"Things look a great deal better so far as the movement of carloads, etc., are concerned, but we are hanging on edge waiting for spring rains.

"The years 1931, 1932 and 1933 were poor crop years in the Northwest, and we are waiting for that one big thing that always gives us prosperity, a good crop. It has been dry, with dirt storms, and it does not look so good. But if we get some good rain in June and July, we can raise a crop and everything will be humming.

"The iron ore people are set for a large movement of iron ore from the Messabe Range in Northern Minnesota. Whether the labor troubles in the automobile industry will slow this down a bit, I am not sure, but I hope the labor troubles will be disposed of satisfactorily."

BUILDING MEN URGED TO SET PRICE LEVELS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Capital and labor in the private construction industry ought to get together and determine at what price levels the type of durable goods which they undertake to produce would become salable on a large scale.

Mr. Rukeyser

Irrespective of the prejudices of the various factors in the industry toward inelastic costs, including wages, effective prices for construction are conditioned by general economic conditions. Specifically, new construction is in competition with old buildings, many of which are for sale at sacrifice prices on account of mortgage troubles. Rents are determined by conditions in old buildings, as well as by the costs of erecting new. As long as rents remain out of line with the cost of new construction, there is no incentive to build.

The construction industry, because of its own family disputes, can quote any fantastic prices it wishes, but they are of no economic significance if buyers are not attracted by such quotations. Statistical studies by Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Company, indicate that prospects for profit from new construction have been dwindling almost uninterruptedly since 1930. For more than a year construction costs have risen, while rents have continued to decline. In these simple statistics is an explanation of why the construction industry remains down in the subnormal zone.

As long as construction costs continue to go up and rents persist in falling, the potential lenders will be cautious. Of course behind these simple facts are the economic consequences of overbuilding during the last boom period. Moreover, there has also been a significant slowing up of the curve of population growth in the United States.

In future public spending, the administration ought to give serious thought to the effect of its policies on construction costs, which are not at a level which encourages private building on a large scale.

Unquestionably, the demand will arise for continued public spending in the absence of private construction.

If due allowance is made for obsolescence, there is unquestionably a scarcity of capital goods in the railroad field.

Under proper conditions, safe self-liquidating loans can be made on a huge scale by the federal government to the railroads for the purchase of modern equipment.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER LXX

Pippin didn't want to sit at that bed, with Bill's hand holding weakly to hers. She wanted to blot out the image of an inert Bill lying there in waxy pallor, the tips of his fingers and his mouth turning blue. She wanted him to sit up, wanted him to laugh and sweep her with happy challenge in his arms.

Even the air was still and lay on one like a weight.

Pippin stole into the room they had taken. She sank on her knees and prayed. She didn't pray now that Bill would live.

She was afraid of Bill; afraid of his deep quiet and of the battle he was fighting. Bill was a lonely stranger dwelling in a mysterious, unknown world.

She crept often to the door and looked at him; at her father sitting there; nurses bringing hot packs or feeding him liquid.

Often through the long day and the long night she said to Helena:

"He looks a little better? Is he?"

"Is that all?"

Helena said desolately: "They were so long finding the plane. So long getting him to the hospital. He lost all that blood. There are other complications."

Pippin went over to the window and looked into the street. Everything had a dreary pallor; wind blew; dust and papers whirled.

"She means," Pippin thought, "that we want to run away from Death."

During the night she awakened with a bitter start. She found herself asking with terror: "Mother, is he still here?"

Dresses for Bill

Pippin got up early. She dressed quickly, taking a fresh sport dress from her suitcase—white because Bill liked her in white. She stood before a mirror combing her hair and fluffing it out. This also was to please him.

Helena came over and kissed her. She said gently: "Pippin you must be brave and equal to what may come."

"Oh, mother, that sounds so final!"

"Everything that can be done, has been done."

"You don't mean Bill is dead?"

"He is sinking."

David stood at the door. Pippin had never seen her father with such a harsh, strong, fighting challenge in his face. But his eyes were full of anxiety.

He said quietly: "Bill wants you, Pippin."

Bill Clings to Her

Bill watched her as she came across the room. Ghostly, like other images filing through his mind. He noticed her hair shining and the mist in her eyes. All in white. He wanted to say so many things. They dropped unuttered away.

She stooped and kissed him gently.

He murmured, like a moan, with pauses between the words: "I loved you so."

"You must still love me, Bill. I want you better."

. . . "Pippin, did you—care?"

"Oh, Bill, I care so much. Don't talk as though it's all passed. I want to ride with you in the plane, again."

She saw suddenly that his eyes had an almost stony fixity. Behind their stare, which he tried to keep hidden was a wild thing leaping. It was fear; it was a blind agony of reluctance. He did not want to die!

She held to his hands and felt their straining clutch—their sad clinging to life.

Pippin Holds Off Death

But the words poured down into that pit where he saw fogs billowing and the faces growing dim. The words made a frail bright ladder. He clung to it. He wanted the yearning, wistful murmur to go on.

He struggled to get free of the gathering silence. He looked to Pippin, then to the door.

"She's coming, Bill—oh, soon now. Do you want to rest? Do I bother you?"

His eyes moved to her face, dwelt there.

"Shall I talk to you, Bill?"

Then Pippin leaned down. She said light tender things and striked his hair. She kissed his forehead, and told him that he looked so sleek—all ready for their dance. She spoke of his mother—again and again because this seemed to hold him. Hours and hours, it seemed to Pippin that she sat there, holding off an unseen, enveloping foe.

"You are winning, Bill!"

He moaned again faintly: "Loved you—wanted you!"

There came a stirring in the hall. A quick light rushing. She heard her father's voice and another's—the voice of eager, frightened love.

"He is waiting—"

His Mother Arrives

She came in quietly, took his hand and laughed in an odd sobbing way.

"Why Bill—Bill darling?"

She dropped on her knees, put her hand ever so gently on his face. She kissed him, and said soft, despite beseeching words.

"Look at me, Bill! You know I'm here? Darling—"

He rallied. He opened his eyes, looked full in her face and smiled: "Mother—at last! So late—"

"I'm not late, Bill. I'm here—you are here!"

"I've waited—mother. For you!"

They left her with David in the room. Her brother accompanied her. But he saw his sister holding to her son, and that she had so little time. He stepped away.

For a long time—half an hour Bill held to his mother's hand. He said a single word or a brief phrase, "Mother!"—"So sorry!"—"Leaving you!"

"You're not going to leave me, Bill! I'm holding you here. I won't let you go!"

Bill Dies

There came no answer. David turned. He saw Bill's eyes and the sudden, momentary, perfect alertness of his face; then a visible thing like a shadow cross it.

She saw that too and cried sharply: "Bill—Bill dearest—NO!"

David put his arrm about her. He said very sadly, leading her away: "He's out of pain now."

Bill's mother wouldn't believe he was gone. She faced Helena and Pippin with her back to the wall, her eyes wide and dry. Her eyes looked blind—dark, lost eyes of the blind.

Then she kept going to the door of that room where he had passed. Mad to look in his face again. She took Pippin's hand and said wildly:

"He cant's be gone! I don't believe he's gone."

All through that terrible Sunday she held to Pippin. Bill loved her. She had been near to him.

Pippin felt drained and pitifully insufficient. She looked in his mother's desolate face and wept openly.

David said bitterly: "It may comfort you to know that all was done. I think all that could be done to save him was done. You had him at his best. So many ways lives are broken. It may not be so tragic to go out when the tide is at its crest."

But he knew and Chickie knew there was no solace for a loss like this. No word from another, however tender, would comfort them if Jon were taken or if Pippin should leave.

There would be always that ache and loneliness: that seeking through the blind, unanswering fog.

Synopsis

Pippin, pretty daughter of Chickie, falls in love with Kevin McPike. Pippin and Kevin's sister, Kathie, are fast friends. Pippin is thrilled by the first real kiss she ever had—from Kevin. When Kevin goes to Europe to pursue his studies, Pippin meets Bill Lodge, a young ensign. At a friend's home, Chickie meets Barry Dunne, the man who caused her so much sorrow. Pippin goes to a party with Bill, but after returning seems unhappy. She tells her father what she heard about her mother, and that she thought him responsible. David explains to her what really happened and Pippin is again happy. Chickie tells Pippin the real story of her life. Pippin goes on hikes with Gregg McClintock, senior at college. She then returns to college and has Vivian Drake as a room mate. Vivian's love affair with Sherry wanes. Vivian disappears and sends a suicide note. Kevin returns. Edward's family and Pippin disapprove of his choice of a bride. Kevin kisses Pippin while on skiing party. Kevin disappoints Pippin, but saves a man's life. Bill arrives home and takes Pippin on airplane trip. They're forced to land in desolate country, but finally find a house and arrive back in town. Bill leaves. Gregg sails. Kevin goes East. Bill's plane crashes.

The Beauty Box

Just what kind of care does your toothbrush receive? Do you chuck it anywhere, let it gather dust? That's not acting like a nice girl.

When you get a new brush, soak it for two hours in a salt water bath. That will clean it thoroughly, make the bristles firm. After it is used, rinse in cold water, shake, hang up so that the bristles will drain.

Every brush should have a twin. Then one is always dry, ready for use.

PACIFICATION METHODS OF CZARIST RUSSIA—PRISONERS ON WAY TO SIBERIA

Czars Alexander II (1855-1881), Alexander III (1881-1894) and Nicholas II (1894-1916) followed the same oppressive policy toward the people. Uprisings for reforms were ruthlessly quelled by the knout of the Cossacks, executions and mass exile to Siberia. Reaction created secret organizations such as Nihilism (nothingness) which attempted to assassinate rulers and high officials in order to bring about more liberal government.

Groups of chained prisoners, exiled to Siberia, many of the intellectual class, students and professional men, were frequent scenes in Czarist Russia. (World History)

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S ADMINISTRATION—HIS CABINET

In 1888 Benjamin Harrison was elected President on the Republican ticket. Important events of his administration (1889-1893): Pensions paid to veterans and refunds of $15,000,000 to states (levied in Civil War) from Treasury surplus; U. S. Navy increased; Sherman Anti-Trust Act passed (but not enforced); McKinley Tariff Bill enacted (highly protective, including farm products) with reciprocation clauses for Latin America; North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington admitted as states. Sherman Silver Act passed, doubling the monthly purchase of silver (as authorized in the Bland Allison Act) by government. The Samoan affair (blocking the annexation of the island by Germany); the quarrel with Britain about the Bering Sea fisheries, diplomatic difficulties with Chile and Italy were delicate international problems peacefully settled. WROUGHT IRON—PRODUCT OF PUDDLING PROCESS

Wrought iron, a tough, soft iron alloy of fibrous structure, contains about 0.15% carbon or less. By one method it is made in the puddling furnace (small reverberatory furnace, above right) from pig iron by removing the greatest part of impurities and most of the carbon. Upon a bed of iron oxide, the pig iron is charged and melted in the puddling furnace; limestone may be added as flux. As impurities are burned out, iron becomes plastic rather than fluid. It is worked by the puddler, using the "rabble," into a ball of about 150 pounds (above left). Ball is removed, fluid slag squeezed out, leaving low carbon wrought iron in fibers, separated by thin film of slag. Rolled, it gives the "muck" bar. After cutting, piling in bundles, reheating and re-rolling the "merchant" bar is obtained. A repeated cutting, piling and rolling gives the "double refined bar."

LA SALLE TEACHING CHILDREN OF THE POOR AT RHEIMS

John Baptiste De La Salle (1651-1719) takes a noble place among the founders of modern education. As a canon at Rheims, France, he started a free school for children of the poor, using his share of the family fortune to feed them. As the teachers in elementary instruction of his time were not satisfactory, he gathered young men under his roof and trained them for that profession. This was the humble beginning of the large organization: Brothers of the Christian Schools, having today about 20,000 teachers all over the world. Following the ideals of the founder, they take the vows of lifelong teaching in poverty, renouncing worldly pleasures.

DOMESTIC HEATING PLANT WITH OIL FIRING

Furnace oil, a by-product of mineral oil refining, is a convenient fuel for a clean, automatic heating plant. Oil is broken up into fine particles, mixed with air, and introduced at bottom of furnace or boiler. If oil-air mixture is proper almost complete combustion takes place, liberating about 19,000 B.T.U. heat per pound of oil burned. Air and oil are introduced under pressure or suction by electric motor-driven fuel pump, blower or a jet. Above: Installation of an oil-burning heating plant. Left: Jet oil burner. (Gen. The drift to radicalism seems to have jammed up against itself. No one seems to have paid any attention to the calamity yodelers. Those Jolly little hill-billies of pessimism.

Of course we must have voices complaining in the wilderness. But nobody stays long on the air without a commercial sponsor these days.

We interviewed a stalwart old reactionary last week on the times and the manners. With his usual political genius he went golfing.

If the President can go fishing in the winter then the Congressman can go golfing in the summer.

Turn about is fair play. It's one of six and another of a half-dozen. But we do not like the way the branches of Congress rap each other over taxes, debts and miscellaneous etcetera. We should be more explicit. But there are some automatic subjects which change themselves.

The finest and most authoritative information was in Senator Dratt's speech when a cautious chairman gave him the floor but kept the gavel.

Senator Dratt said, "Gentlemen and so forth."

What we really wanted to know was what we would do after we got all the gold in the world. After hearing the Senator's explanation it looks like we will give it back to Europe and start all over again.

The Senator no longer makes long speeches on any topic. He learned his lesson while dishing out a stentatorian chirp on the Rocky Mountain Sea Level Bicycle Route.

At the end of three hours the Senator looked up from his manuscript, checked the vacant desks and remarked, "Heck, I might as well go golfing too."

He went. A quota in the rough and a quorum in a bunker constitute a plurality.

Another Major Blunder

The Attempt to Indict Mr. Mellon Was a Discreditable Political Move

No one who wishes the administration well, and who has a due sense of the energy with which it has undertaken its tasks, can fail to regret sincerely that another major blunder must be chalked up against its record.

The abortive prosecution of Andrew W. Mellon for alleged income tax irregularities must certainly be regarded as a major blunder, rivalling, if not surpassing, as an error of judgment, the cancellation of the air mail contracts.

Many of the evil elements which were present in the cancellations are revealed in the administration's procedure against Mr. Mellon. We have again the assurance from a high government official—this time the Attorney General instead of the Postmaster General—that there was something very wrong, before any wrong had been diclosed. We have the same unexplained departure from the customary course for such a matter to pursue.

With a disputed tax liability, the law contemplates a hearing before the Treasury Department; an appeal, if the taxpayer is dissatisfied, to the Board of Tax Appeals; and if the assessment is still contested, a review of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

This has become the established practice, but in the case of Mr. Mellon there was, apparently for the first time, a complete departure from it.

Instead, we had an announcement from the Attorney General of the United States that he would seek a criminal indictment against Mr. Mellon. This was accompanied by an assertion the government had ample evidence that the former Secretary of the Treasury had been guilty of cheating the government under circumstances which warranted the presentation of the case to the grand jury with a view to a criminal proceeding.

Mr. Mellon insisted that his return had been prepared carefully and conscientiously, and called attention to the government's singular deviation from its customary procedure.

There was a noticeable suggestion of spite and vindictiveness in the whole incident, which is very unbecoming to a powerful government in dealing with a citizen.

It may be "excellent to have a giant's strength," but it is "tyrannous to use it like a giant!"

The truth of the matter—very unpleasant truth—is that the Department of Justice has come a bad cropper. The grand jury, after the presentation of the case against Mr. Mellon, promptly threw out the charges as not constituting a true bill.

The net result is an injury to the prestige of the administration which it is too soon adequately to measure.

The Attorney General of the United States is the head of the nation's Department of Justice. By virtue of his position, he is the leader of the American bar. He is supposedly imbued with the spirit of our laws. His official conduct is supposed to reflect the spirit of our institutions and the people's sense of justice.

That he should be accused of bias and a narrow animus is regrettable enough, but in this case he is also charged, with many appearances which support the further charge, that he has sought to arouse prejudice against the accused in advance of the submission of the case. This is a severe reflection upon an Attorney General of the United States.

The attempt to railroad an indictment against Mr. Mellon is an incident disgraceful not only to the administration but to the nation.

Mr. Mellon has been a great Secretary of the Treasury. He contributed a great service in reducing the national debt and in reducing taxation at the same time.

His greatness will be recognized in the future, especially in contrast to the visionary policies and injurious results of the present ultra-radical government.

Mr. Mellon has not only been a conspicuously able but a scrupulously honest man.

There is no reason for the accusation that the present government made against him except that he belongs to a different party; and that it is the apparent object of the incumbent radical government to discredit anyone who possesses anything.

The prompt refusal of the grand jury to indict Mr. Mellon was a credit to the jury and an accurate indication of the attitude of the public towards the cheap and disgraceful politics which it was the intention of the government to play.

The incident has only one useful side, and that is to reveal the length which the communistic element of the government is willing to go to in order to wreak their wrath upon capitalism and the more conservative and more creditable elements of the community.

The Postoffice Outlet

The Present Ramp Plan Is Undesirable and Should Be Changed.

Mayor W. N. McNair has renewed the protest against the federal authorities' plan to have mail trucks enter and leave the new postoffice on a ramp, now under construction, paralleling Bigelow boulevard and running into Seventh avenue near its intersection with the boulevard.

As the Mayor says, this plan, if adhered to, will result in congestion inimical to the best interests of the postoffice and dangerous to the lives of the citizens.

Every organization in Pittsburgh that has to do with street and traffic planning has condemned the ramp. Nothing can be said in its favor except that its initial cost would be less than the cost of the alternative plan proposed by the Mayor and indorsed by the various planning boards, a plan calling for the elevation of Bigelow boulevard over Seventh avenue and a direct driveway from the postoffice platform into the boulevard opposite Washington street.

This rich community of ours, with population greater than that of many a state, is one of the heaviest contributors of taxes to the United States Treasury; and yet of the three billion, three hundred millions of dollars recently alloted by the Public Works Administration we received next to nothing, while the city of Chicago alone was granted more than fifty-two millions of dollars.

A new postoffice for Pittsburgh was recommended a quarter of a century ago, and Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury in President Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet, even came here to pick a site. But so reluctant is Washington to spend money in Pittsburgh that we are only getting the postoffice now, and the job is being skimped by not providing a proper outlet for the trucks.

We have a number of prominent politicians who profess to be on intimate terms with the chiefs of the Roosevelt administration. They are asking votes on the strength of their supposed friendship with persons high in the councils of the administration.

Let them demonstrate their influence by getting Washington to abandon its dangerous ramp plan for the new postoffice and adopt the sensible plan, even if it does cost more.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

ON THE WAY, May 15.—We are gliding serpent-like, with two puffing engines, through the Colorado high-country. The winey air is thin and heady—a slight giddiness. Sheer boulder cliffs are speckled green with pine fir. Tired-looking women come to frame shack doorways to wave.

Transcontinental trains are the high country's only relief from the bleak slate-gray monotony. About the mountain-side cabins are tender tugs of domestic effort. Porches of broken rock. Graveled walks tumbling with an intaglio of sage brush. In back yards goats tethered to long ropes.

Bald-faced cattle stand dumbly near the almost dry water holes of the ravines. Lean men idle about the station platforms with the same immobility, typed by the inevitable row of pins in their coat lapels. But the civilizing influence of the movies has flowered a chic among the mountain maids.

From a smouldering glower of amethyst clouds hanging low on the Missouri horizon last night an electric dazzle forked the sky. Streaks of fire raced along the ground and exploded with zizboom-aah. Then the patter of rain. Nowhere is so cozy as in a train, seemingly in spaceless levitation, plunging gallantly through a storm.

* * *

There is horrendous and strangely sustained coloring about the frame towns on the high country's plateaux—jaundiced yellows, sickly pinks and poisonous greens of wall paper. It is doubtless an effort to startle the eye in the surrounding flat monotone. If that is the aim, it's a good job.

* * *

At Raton, New Mexico, I took advantage of a 15-minute halt for a leg stretch with the Boston. We strolled down the wide main street. Three corners away I thought I heard the conductor's "'Bo-aa-rd!" and my heart stood still. I got back in nothing flat, white faced and gasping. "What the world is the matter?" inquired the Missus. "The high altitude," I fibbed. "It got me." Thus avoiding fraidy-cat hoots.

* * *

Our 82-year-old aunt, a prodigious reader all her life, knows more about the Santa Fe trail than those of us who have crossed it many times. To reach octogenerian years with zestful curiosity is a fine accomplishment. And to attain it with a prideful glow over our national heritage, as she has, is even finer.

* * *

The sun glares down mercilessly on New Mexico's arid miles. The only reliefs to the vista are the snow-capped ridges, faery in their tumbled whiteness. Out the car window I see a Mexican in sombrero and denims plodding the motor highway. He must be miles from a settlement. Alone on the lonely prai-ree. He does not even glance up at the rushing train. Perhaps his thoughts are of the coming moonlight, the strumming guitar and a senorita. But from where I sit New Mexico does not seem to cradle such romance. It is a world of alkaline gray, holy, profane, grim although exquisite with haunting stillness.

* * *

Will Hays is a constant affront to the sluggard. He has the activity of the lizard darting about hot stone piles of the desert. At every station he was handed a sheaf of telegrams and the typewriter of his secretary, Earl Bright, is always clicking. Yet he regards these trips as a sort of letup.

* * *

Albuquerque has become a mecca for autograph hunters, more persistent than those around the New York theaters. They specialize, of course, in movie stars, who take advantage of the longest stop, 25 minutes, to promenade the station platform. Shawled, burnt-black Indians still squat before their piles of for-sale pottery. The depression has not worn them down. And why should it? In all my visits here I have never seen one make a sale. A train porter tells me the Indians lost their best customer when Roscoe Arbuckle passed from mortal view. Every once in awhile in a larkish humor he would buy them out and scatter the souvenirs among the train's passengers. And the old bucks would be "off the reservation" for days.

* * *

Things came to the customary pretty pass midway between Albuquerque and Gallup this evening. "So you did the packing?" observed a certain lady bent over the family suit case. I feared some dereliction and, affecting to be still languidly wan from that high altitude at Raton, flickered the affirmative and inscrutable smile of Mona Lisa's brother. "Wrapping a bottle of red ink in your pajamas," she continued flipping me the loose cork, "certainly smacks of genius!"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Why Are We Bored!

Something ails us Moderns.

Even if Depression vanished;
Even if Good Times come back;
Even if we all had jobs again—
Something would still ail us.
FOR WE'RE BORED!

AND BOREDOM IS THE MOST DANGERIUS DISEASE ON EARTH.

Boredom will spoil life for a person, even if he has all the breaks.

Boredom will send an individual or a nation on the rocks quicker than any other catastrophe.

WHY?

How did we become bored?

Our grandfathers weren't bored.

Our fathers weren't bored.

They weren't quite as excited as our grandfathers, but they were interested and proud.

It put a man on his mettle.

It kept him curious and eager.

THEN, SUDDENLY, THE FIZZ WENT OUT OF LIFE.

Curiosity, enthusiasm, excitement, departed.

People became hard-boiled.

People's eyes became like dead fish eyes.

A man meant nothing to himself.

WE WERE BORED.

Americans, English, Italians, French, Germans, everybody was bored. For the first time in history, the whole civilized world was bored. (Only peasants and savages, people who worked with their hands, weren't bored. Remember that important fact. They might be stupid, or sullen, or tired, or rebellious. But they weren't bored.)

WHY WERE WE BORED?

WHY HAD LIFE LOST ITS MEANING?

WHY HAD WORK LOST ITS MEANING?

WHY HAD WORKERS LOST THEIR MEANING?

BECAUSE MACHINES HAD COME—

AND MACHINES HAD TAKEN THE MEANING OUT OF EVERYTHING.

Machinery did the jobs.

So machinery took the kick out of jobs—

(You can't get pride out of a job unless you put pride into it.)

And the meaning out of life.

(What does life mean if a machine does it for you?)

WHY ARE WE BORED?

THAT IS WHY.

MACHINES HAVE SHOVED US OUT OF OUR PLACE.

WHAT WILL CURE OUR BOREDOM?

PUT MACHINES BACK INTO THEIR PLACE.

Run machines—

But don't let them run us.

Get the good out of machines—

But also leave some good in life;

Leave some questions in life;

Leave some challenges;

Leave some margin of uncertainty—

THEN WE'LL STOP BEING BORED.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

COMES TO US in the news of the North a moving tale of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, that magnificent organization which has been the very backbone of Canada for the past three-quarters of a century. But this is a tale, not of how they always get their man, those bronzed lads in the broad, felt hats and scarlet tunics, but a tale of how their man goth them.

To Corp. Percy Graves, in charge of the mounted police post at Norway House, came a police circular announcing that James Joseph Whiteway, "Buster" Whiteway, was a much-wanted man. For on an evening in September Mr. Whiteway, gun in hand, and contrary to numerous of His Majesty's laws and the welfare and peace of the Dominion of Canada, held up and robbed a storekeeper at a little side station named Bay Trail, in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Corp. Graves happened to know "Buster" Whiteway, and he knew, too, that Whiteway, a fur hunter, dealing with several posts of the Hudson Bay Company, had a trap-line at Cross Lake, north of Graves' own post at Norway. So Graves took the trail with his dog team and late one evening he reined in his huskies before a trapper's cabin.

Inside was "Buster," tall, dark, good-looking, rather like a very tall and robust Jack Gilbert. That was the end of the trail, or so both of them thought, for the Corporal had the drop on his man. He took "Buster" back to Norway and radioed out that he had his man. Back came orders to hold him until a plane driven by Pilot Spence could call for him. And a day or so later, Spence's plane slid down from the ceiling and muted its thunder to a lazy drone.

Plane Brought Down By Blizzard

ALONG WITH THE pilot when it took off, there were five men crowded into the plane—Ernest Robinson, a prospector, and L. L. Cooke, the plane mechanic, with Corporal Graves, of course. Spence turned his bird into the north wind and gave it the gun. A blizzard was blowing up, but their destination was only about 160 miles away, and pilots in the Far North are used to taking chances with the cold and the winds.

So the airplane climbed high into the gray sky and sped westward. Then the snow came, in one all-enveloping blinding blanket. Far down on Moose Lake, fishermen heard the deep thunder of the motors but could see nothing, and shook their heads as they felt the bite of the cold and measured the deepening snow. Spence dared not stay up. He calculated his distances and guessed correctly enough where he was, but flying almost blind, he misjudged his landing and then came the crash.

One wing tip was wrenched off as the plane hit the snow and gouged at a tree, and then the big plane roared on to smash herself into a twisted mass of wreckage. Three men were hurled from the cabin as the plane made its final crash. They lay senseless on the snow. Over a little way sprawled a dead man, Spence, the pilot. Wedged in the wreck, badly injured and unconscious, was Corporal Graves.

There was the picture when one of the three men who had been lying in the snow came to his senses. Still weak and dizzy from the crash, he looked about him. He was free. There was no one, nothing to stop him. The wilderness was his home and the storm no great peril to a man like him. There was the choice this man had to make, the prisoner, "Buster" Whiteway, as he stood there in the white loneliness seeing the sprawled figure of the dead man, seeing the unconscious mounted policeman crumpled in the cabin, seeing the two men lying senseless in the cold.

Whiteway's Hard Struggle to Get Aid

FREEDOM OR A long term in prison? How could he hesitate? He did not. From the wreckage of the cabin he lifted the badly injured corporal. Then he removed Robinson, the prospector, Cooke, the mechanic, was still living, but his hands were already frozen and his body had been badly bruised and broken. Whiteway rescued Cooke and covered the suffering hands against the biting frost. And then, half delirious, himself with a broken ankle, he made his way to the shoreline, half walking, half crawling, and followed the line until he made out dimly a fishing boat moving in Moose Lake.

Those fishermen were the only possible chance of help within 30 miles and Whiteway knew it. He screamed but the wind drowned his voice, threw it away into space, and the fishing boat moved on. His heart sank in him, and then, of a sudden, the wind which had betrayed him brought faintly but clearly the howling of a dog, perhaps a mile away.

Whiteway fought his way through the brush, falling, groaning with agony, but keeping on, his teeth meeting through his lower lip, until he came to a rough shack where a man was bedding down a pair of horses for the night. Within a few minutes he was on his way to get help, and presently gentle hands were lifting the injured men, including Whiteway, their rescuer, into sleds made comfortable with hay and blankets.

Relays of Indian runners sped through the woods to reach the railway, 40 miles distant by bush trail, to telegraph word to the outside and bring in medical aid. It was hours before a plane could land a doctor and a mounted policeman. Spence was dead, of course, and all the survivors were in bad shape. All would have been dead if it hadn't been for "Buster" Whiteway. And a little later, when "Buster" was taken to court at Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, when he pleaded guilty to robbery, the judge smiled in pretty friendly fashion when he handed Whiteway a sentence of only six months, to date from the time of his arrest, which made the punishment practically nominal.

Usually for the crime of robbery, the courts in that part of Canada give a stiff penitentiary sentence and 20 or 30 lashes laid on hard at the whipping post. Robbery is not a joke in Canada, and the sole reason for leniency was extraordinary self-sacrifice and heroism shown by this Jean Valjean of the Far North, this man who was willing to face half a lifetime in prison and lay down his own life to save—not his friends—but his enemy.

Navy Cruise to Orient Would Be Timely

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S forthcoming cruise aboard the U. S. S. Indianapolis to Honolulu may be followed by a cruise of the American fleet to Hawaiian waters next winter.

The fleet will start back to the Pacific in the late autumn. A cruise from the Panama Canal to Honolulu would provide a useful test of its efficiency. In the year following, this cruise might well be extended to Australia and the Philippine Islands. These two cruises would serve the useful purpose of demonstrating to the world that the United States looks upon the Pacific as a free ocean and not an Asiatic lake.

There has been altogether too much agitation in Japan in recent years regarding the movements of the American fleet. It never occurs to the American people to criticize the movements of the Japanese fleet in the Pacific. They claim the same right to maneuver their fleet in the Pacific or the Atlantic at will, without incurring the hostile criticism of any foreign government professedly on friendly terms with this country.

The cruise of the fleet to the Atlantic has served to bring home to the American people the primary purpose they had in building the Panama Canal. The construction of that waterway connecting the two great oceans enables the American fleet to maneuver at will in either ocean. This averts the necessity of dividing the fleet. And keeping the fleet together well nigh doubles its effectivenesss as the strong right arm of our national defense.

Would Stabilize Philippine Situation

A CRUISE OF the fleet to the Far East next year would be timely because it would afford an opportunity for strengthening friendly relations between this country and Australia. It would also serve to stabilize the situation in the Philippines during the critical period soon to begin in that archipelago.

Under the terms of the so-called Philippine Independence Act, the Philippine Islands will remain under American sovereignty for at least 10 years after they are given complete autonomy, and maybe for a much longer period. After a Philippine government has been set up under a constitution that meets the approval of the President of the United States, this country will remain responsible for the protection of the islands and for the maintenance of law and order there for another decade.

It will be much more difficult to discharge this responsibility under a Philippine government than it has been under the present form of government.

After the Philippine people take over the executive and judicial branches of government and the sovereignty of the United States is represented at Manila chiefly by a high commissioner, we shall lose none of our responsibility for keeping order within the islands and protecting them from outside attack until they are finally set adrift 12, 15 or 20 years hence. But in the meantime we shall be left in the dangerous position of retaining before the world a responsibility that may at any time severely test our authority to discharge it.

Would Allay Apprehension

A CRUISE OF the American fleet to the Philippines in the summer of 1935 would be the symbol of American determination not to run away from its responsibility in the Philippines while the American flag flies at Manila over the office of the American high commissioner. This demonstration of American purpose would serve to allay apprehension within the islands. It would also strengthen the influences in Japan which are striving to keep alive some spark of parliamentary government, in spite of the ascendency of the military wing.

Meantime, the President's cruise into the Pacific this summer, his inspection of our defenses throughout the Hawaiian Islands, his program for giving the people of that territory a truly American government and his report to Congress and the country upon his return will serve to focus the attention of the American people upon the fact that the peace of the Pacific depends in no small part on swiftly building up the American Navy to equality with the strongest.
